How The Earth Looks At An Altitude Of Four Miles

In the May American Magazine Augustus Post writes an article entitled "Experiences of an Airman." The highest point that Mr. Post ever reached was four miles. Following is his description of how the earth looks from that altitude:

"For every mile ascent, ninety-six miles of view open out, so that at the highest point I reached, more than four mile, one could see two hundred miles on the earth's surface in every direction unless low-hanging clouds lie between the aeronaut and the rest of humanity. Sometime like field of polar ice, sometime opal and rose and gold sometimes crimson with sunset glow,—it is a wonderful thing to see the upper side of a sunset!—the floor of clouds, ever shifting, ever taking on more varied shapes, move beneath you or you rise through a high floating one in brief, white solitude. One side of the cloud [illegible] rays of the sun, while wave of orange, purple and sulphurous, yellow stretch across to the cold blues of the east and the silver splendor of the moon; for it is at full moon that long distance balloon races are always arranged to take place. Here and there fountain-like forms rise from the mass stretching beneath you and curl back like giant flowers; they are currents of hot air breaking through the cloud bank from below.

"Your pulse-rate raises; your respiration grows faster, perhaps your hands and feet a trifle numb, as the barograph needle rises—indeed by this time it has risen above the card entirely, for the record only to sixteen thousand feet, and is making its mark on the metal of the cylinder; in time it will leave the cylinder altogether.

"If you open a bottle of water, the air that has been confined at a lower level pops out as charged water. Going higher still,—for men have reached an altitude of seven miles,—the air is so thin that one must take along oxygen to breathe, the pressure at sea-level being fifteen pounds. Up here you are subjected to only half the pressue; you feel lighter than cork; the nerves drawn taut. If you poke a pencil or your finger into your skin indentation will remain just like making hole in a piece of putty. Doctors call this 'pitting,' and on the surface of the earth they take it as a proof that life is extinct. There is less 'mountain sickness,' than one would think, judging from the nausea felt on the high peaks of earth, but then in mountain-climbing there is great physical exertion, exhaustion even, and here there is absolute calm—nothing to do till tomorrow, and that seems a long way ahead, with no [illegible] as some movement of your own jars the basket a trifle."

MISS YATES' RECITAL WAS GRAND SUCCESS

The musical recital given in the school auditorium last Friday evening by Miss Bessie Lena Yates and her pupils, was greatly enjoyed. There was a large crowd present, and there would have been even a larger number hand there not been several counter attractions on the same evening. Each and every number on the program was highly appreciated, and given loud applause. Miss Yates is a most talented pianist and the splendid manner in which all on the program rendered their selections, is convincing that she is a success ful instructor.

TWO REVIVAL MEETINGS SCHEDULED FOR JUNE

After they close, a revival will be begun at the Methodist church on June 28th, conducted by Rev. W. H. Whaling and wife of Austin. Rev. Immortality

Many doubt immortality who accept just as marvelous a thing, birth, without a single question. One is as much a miracle as the other, and to omnipotence, just as easy. We doubt a life beyond the grave, but what evidence in nature points against it? Only so life after this one. The flowers die and leafless trees wave their ghostly arms, solemn and sapless. To all appearances they are dead. But when the spring returns again and the dull brown earth is warmed by the glow of the amorous sun, the roots and the seed are quickened in the ground, that mysterious thing called life is wakened and the beautiful flowers are born again. The trees take on green foliage once more, and all the world is decked in pretty colors. The bees wake up, the birds begin to chirp and fly about, and tender grasses rear their timid heads in many sequestered nooks and corners in prairie and in field. Life comes stealing forth from somewhere, the trees deserted while the wintry blasts came howling from the north once again are redolent with song and the fragrance of blossoms, white and blue and red and yellow furnish honey to the hungry winged things that sip the sweets that nestle in their perfumed hearts. The miracle of spring is re-enacted every year, and yet we travel on toward the end, refusing to believe that we behold. What is more wonderful than a little child, that lay beneath its mother's heart until she loved it into life, and at last it nestled a tiny thing, all pink and dimpled upon her snowy breast a breathing soul? The fact that we are to live again is no greater marvel than the fact that we are living know. We live by faith all day and all night, and yet, in our obstinacy we deny a thing we know we should believe. —Cleburne Enterprise.

How Love Came

Little Sammy was generally at loggerheads with his father, who had a habit of using his razor strop in a way that was not in accordance with Sammy's views.

One morning, after the razor strop had been more than usually busy, Sammy's mother went out into the field to look for the much-dropped chall.

To her intense astonishment, she found him fondling a huge goat for which he usually professed a deep hatred.

"Why, Sammy, darling, it is nice to see you being so kind to poor Billy! Why are you being so gentle with him today?"

Over Sammy's face came a look of unspeakable gratitude as he gave the wondering goat another carrot.

"He butted father into the pond this morning!" murmured the dear little chap, patting his four-footed friend affectionately. —New York Mail.

Honest, Energy and Ambition Depend on Physical Condition

An eminent German scientist has said, Honesty is a state of mind dependent on the physical condition." Everyone knows that energy and ambition depend on how one feels." The liver plays an important part in one's feelings. If it is performing its natural function we feel energetic and ambitions. When it is not working right, we feel depressed and lazy. Headache, indigestion, constipation and backache are the signs.

Calomel used to do, but it proved so dangerous that medical science had to find an other course.

GRIGSBY'S LIV-VER-LAX does better work than calomel, and without danger and without any bad after-effects. This remarkable liver remedy is for sale in 50c and $1.00 bottles by Eagle Lake Drug Co who guarantees its qualities by offering to return purchase price. Look for the likeness of L. K. Grigsby on every bottle.

Mending.

Two suffragettes were talking one evening at the club dinner over a game of billiards. "How is your husband?" the first asked.

"Slowly mending," replied the other.

"Oh, I didn't know he was ill!" said the first.

"He isn't ill," the other explained, laughing heartily. "He's slowly mending my khaki riding breeches."

In the article in last week's paper, the Headlight was misinformed in regard to the nature of the operation recently performed on Constable Callison. We stated that his was the first case on record where the patient had survived. We should have said three were operated on for the same thing about the same time, and Mr. Callison was the only one to survive.

Good Roads Help in Many Ways.

Good roads never fail to make farm proverty more valuable. This is a fact universally conceded whereever good roads have superseded bad ones. Every man should be so interested in better roads that he will not depend solely on the county, the road overseers or anybody else to smooth over the rough places, but use individual efforts and help to bring his road up to the highest state of perfection. The good results will come back to him in more ways than one. The splitlog drag is doing wonderful work in this direction. Every time the drag is used on a road it enchances the value of the property along the way. The system has been tried out not only in hundreds of counties, but in Camp county. The community with the good roads spirit is the community that is prospering and developing rapidly. Good roads promote of pride that reaches into every nook and corner of the home. They suggest more paint, better fences, prettier yards, more home comforts and a development of the social and intellectual side of life that is worth more than all material things combined.—Pittsburg Gazette.

Biliousness and Constipation.

For years I was troubled with biliousness and constipation, which made life miserable for me. My appetite failed me, I lost my useful force and vitality. Dyspepsia, indigestion and catharics only made matters worse. I do not know where I should be today had I not tried Chamberlain's Tablets. The tablets relieve the ill feeling at once, strengthen the digestive functions, purify the stomach, liver and bowels, help to the system to do its work naturally.—Mrs. Rosa Davis, Blanchard, Ala.
