"... my FORD V-8 cut cost per ton mile almost half"

Ford Motor Company,
Houston, Texas.
Gentlemen:
My 1934 Ford V-8 1½ ton truck has had a fixed pay load at all times of 7,000 pounds or 3½ tons. I have driven this truck 105,182 miles. During this period my total repair expense has been less than $20.00. All the parts, except fuel pump, distributor and spark plugs, are the original. Most of this time, the truck was operated twenty-four hours per day without stopping only to load and unload. At this time the gasoline consumption is approximately 10 miles to the gallon and oil consumption is satisfactory.
I honestly believe that the Ford truck has cut my costs per ton mile almost in half and I have no hesitancy in recommending this truck to anyone no matter how severe the working conditions are.
Yours very truly,
(Signed) Sam W. Collins
518 N. San Marcos St.,

THE JOKESMITH

Some fox made mighty stolen some overish borrowed" If you run across a good one, mail it to us.

"Hell, yes!" said the devil as he answered the phone.

"Could I have just one kiss? Sorry, I don't cater to the retail trade.

She called it laundry whiskey because it took her unawares.

"Pots was a great man. At his death three towns were named after him: Pottsville, Pottstown and Chambersburg."

It is very difficult to persuade yourself that a confirmed liar is wholly untrustworthy when he says nice things about you.

"Does your boy friend have ambitions?"

"I'll say. Ever since he's been knee high."

"Curse it! Curse it!" hissed the villian, snatching at the girl's waist.

"No, it ain't either!" she retorted. "It's a girdle."

"Tell me Bob, what's your definition of a modern girl?"

"Legs by Steinway, body by Fisher, and necks by the hour!"

When I'm walking home from the theatre, I have to avoid windy corners.

"No foolin'."

"No undies."

"I'm cutting quite a figure," said the chorus girl as she sat on a broken bottle.

Two heads are better than one. Especially when you are tossing a coin.

He—"When I was born, they shot off a cannon."

She—"Too bad they missed."

"Is Mary the home-loving type of girl?"

"Naw, ya gotta have a roadster."

He—"I'm going to kiss you."

She—"It takes two to make a bargain."

He—"O. K. I'll give you two kisses."

"Bare knees are a luxury."

"Why?"

"To see, now and then, one some time!"

Astrologer—"Yes, I can tell you what the future has in store."

Romeo—"Fine. I'd like to know what Joan Harlow is doing Saturday night."

"Why Marie, have you penciled your eyebrows?"

"However, did you think so?"

"Pancake—Why on earth do you keep your nose so tight to the grindstone?

Sockman—So my wife can turn up hers at our neighbors."

Fir—They say that money talks. Will hide—Then I certainly have had an impediment in my speech for a long time.

"Shame on you! Do you think getting drunk is the way to regain your wedding anniversary?"

"Who's drunk, to remember?"

"Most people can't see what's right under their noses."

"If they could, a lot of mustaches would be shaved off!"

"Let's take a walk in the garden."

"Oh, I haven't much time."

"Treat's all right, I'm an efficiency expert."

"Why does Smith always wear his hair pompadour style?"

"Oh, he likes his comb so well that he refuses to part with it."

"Doc, I've been losing my hair."

"But my good man, I'm not a scalp specialist. I'm a dentist."

"I know it. I've been losing my hair worrying about my teeth."

"Something tells me you know the quickest way to a girl's heart."

"Sure, sweetheart, but I always like to detour a bit first."

Sergeant—"Did you shave this morning, Brown?"

Cop—"Yes, sergeant."

Sergeant—"Well, next time stand a bit closer to the razor."

"Where ya been for the last two hours?"

"Talking to the girl at the cigar counter."

"What did she say?"

"No."

Aviator—"Gosh, Scott! The engine's missing and the propeller's snapped!"

Nervous Passenger—"Thank goodness! Now we can go down!"

Mrs. Boxing—And how would you like to be run entirely by your wife like Bill Bilver, my?

Petzing—Oh, it wouldn't be so bad if I had a wife as smart as Bill has.

Dolcini—This violin is over a hundred years old.

Pometto—Don't you worry about it. No one will know the difference; it sounds almost as good as new.

"Jimmy says that hospital was built at his expense."

"Yes, when his rich uncle died he left Jimmy $1,000 and the remainder of his fortune to the hospital."

Doctor's Brie—Darling, isn't the sky ami moon beautiful tonight?

Groom (dreamily)—Yes, dear, that cloud looks just like a mouse.

Ship peak is exactly the color of a diseased liver.

First Barber—I want a girl who is nicely polished, a girl who is special and grand.

Second Barber—You don't want a girl—you want a piano!

Lady Bountiful—Here's a penny for poor man. Tell me how did you become so poor?

Beggar—I was a fool like you, mum, giving money away to the poor and needy at Christmas time."

Guess—My wife is very busy these days getting ready to make some political speeches to women's clubs.

Gosh—Is she working hard on her addresses?

Guess—No, only on her dresses.

His Honor—This speeding has got to stop. Have you ever been before me before?

Culprit—No, sir. I tried to get before you on the road this morning but my car went do more than 90 miles per hour.

Front Row—Aren't you ashamed to wear that string of beads for a costume, ma'am?

Burlesque Queen—I'll say I am. I haven't had a new string of beads in months.

Candidate—Can any of you recall a time in my life when I was afraid to call a spade a spade?

Voice—No and neither can anyone remember when you weren't afraid to take one in your hands and use it.

Betty—I believe my husband is the most generous man in the world.

Jane—Why do you say that?

Betty—I gave him a dozen neckties on his birthday and he gave them all to some charity organization.

"How lucky I am," laughed the stout man. "I thought I sat down on my last hat. I see now it is someone else's."

"You mean how unlucky you are," said the slender man rolling up his sleeves. "That's my hat."

Old Lady—Aren't you ashamed of yourself to be throwing stones at that little boy?

Allan—No. I ain't. He's got whooping cough and if I went close enough to hit him with my fist I might catch it.

"There goes another married man," said the girl at the candy counter.

"What makes you think so?" asked the next customer in line.

"He used to buy a two-pound box of candy once a week and now he buys a one-pound box twice a year."

Englishman—My great-grandfather was made an earl by the king whose likeness you see on this coin.

American—That's nothing. The Indian whose head you see on this one made an angel of my great-grandfather.

Wife—Goodness, I believe you're coming down with a cold again.

Hubby—Well, you know what to do at the first sign of a cold.

Wife—Sure, look up all the whiskey in the house.

Neighbor—I see your husband has quit work and gone fishing.

Mrs. Fall—He's gone fishing but he hasn't quit work. He works a lot harder fishing than he does around the house.

"What happened, George?" she asked her husband who had got out of the car to investigate.

"Puncture," he said briefly.

"You ought to have been looking out for that," she remarked. "Didn't your remember the guide book you there was a fork in the road?"

"I told the boss he'd better watch out for falling hair or his wife would divorce him."

"But every man has falling hair occasionally."

"Yes, dearie, but they're not blonde, silky and twelve inches long."

A young barrister paused in the midst of a boring harrangue and said to Lord Ellenborough: "Is it the pleasure of the court that I should proceed with my statement?"

Lord Ellenborough replied: "Please, Mr. ——, has been out of the question for a long time, but you may proceed."

The case before the court had been going on for many days, and concerned a claim that involved wearisome technicalities. Things were not improved when the counsel opened his address at unnecessary length. He said:

"Then, my lord, comes the question of bags; they might have been full bags, or half-full bags, or again, my lord, they might have been empty bags."

"Oh," interrupted the exasperated judge—"they might have been windbags."

A young man walked uneasily into the doctor's office.

"My good friend," said he to said "I've just dropped in to tell you how growth I benefited from your treatment."

"But I don't remember you," he said. "You're not one of my patients."

"I know," replied the young man, "but my uncle was and I'm his heir."

The spirits of General Sherman and Napoleon were having a little talk about the changing world.

"Nappy, I'm in hell," remarked Sherman, sadly.

"Hoy, yes," quoted Bonaparte.

"It's this way," responded Sherman. "The League of Nations is declaring war abolished and the theologians are declaring hell abolished. This doesn't give me a lee to stand on."

Alexander P. Jones, who had retired after 30 years as a clerk in the Department of Agriculture in Washington decided to move across the river to Virginia and go into the chicken business. Armed with a small roll of greenbacks he started out to purchase his flock.

"I want a hundred hens at least two years old," he told the man with whom he intended to do business.

"Why do you want 'em so old?" asked the curious poultryman.

"Because I am going to run my business in a business way and I don't want anything around except experienced hens," was the reply.

An old Southern planter was discussing the hereafter with one of the colored servants. "Sam," he said, "if you die first, I want you to come back and tell me what it's like over there. If I die first, I'll come back and tell you what it's like."

"Dat suits me, masse," replied the old negro, "but if you dies first, Ah wants you to promise me dat you'll come back in de daytime."

A sleight of hand performer called to his assistance a bright looking chap from whom he borrowed a knife. He carefully examined it to a handkerchief and handed it back to the boy who unwrapped it exposing a gold watch. "No," said the magician, "I shall charge it back again."

"Oh, no," replied the youngster as he placed the watch in his pocket. "I like it better as it is."

A little girl in the zoological park tossed bits of a bun to the stork, which grabbed them greedily, and bobbed its head toward her for more.

"What kind of a bird is it, mama?" the child asked.

Mother read the placard and answered that it was a stork.

"O-o-o-h," the little girl cried, as her eyes rounded, of course, he recognized me."

Operator: "Hello! This is long distance. I have a call for you from Miami."

"Hello! This is Ben. Listen, Jack. I'm stranded here and need $100."

"I can't hear. Something is wrong with the phone."

"I want $100!"

"I can't hear you."

Operator: "I can hear it O. K."

"Well, you give him the $100."

A farmer was trying to waken his hired man at a. m.

Hired Man (yawning)—"What are we going to do today, boss?"

Farmer—"Harvest oats."

Hired Man—"Are they wild?"

Farmer—"Nothing wild about 'em that I know of. Why do you ask that?"

Hired Man (puzzled)—"If they're not wild, why do we have to sneak up on 'em in the dark?"

Two Irishmen roomed in an eight-story apartment, on the top floor, and could not sleep on Sunday morning as the sun would shine in the windows and wake them up. They bought some black paint and painted the windows and lay down to sleep. When they woke up they realized they would be late for work, as it was 7:15. They rushed to their jobs, and the foreman looked at them in bewilderment. Pat says:

"Faith, and what's the matter, boss? We're only twenty minutes late."

Says the foreman:

"Twenty minutes? Where were you Monday and Tuesday?"

VOLUME V NUMBER 30

Senior History

"Happy is that Nation which has no history." If this principle applies to graduating classes then, happy are we, the class of 1936 "where history is now in the making and is so largely a matter of future expectations. The deeds we have done though by no means insignificant pale into nothingness when compared to what we are going to try to do and do.

And if History is little else than a catalogue of crimes, mistakes, and misfortunes of man the Seniors of this year have but little to relate for they have committed no crime but cutting classes, no mistakes but in the choice of this particular profession as class historian, and no misfortunes but mumps, measles and "pop quizzes" have come up.

High school students are not expected to do great deeds, for most of their time is spent in preparing for a life of great deeds in the future. Neither are they supposed to make much history, for the large part of their time is spent with studying—at least Miss Phillips thinks so.

Still our three years have not been so uneventful. We have tried to live so that we shall not be here today and forgotten tomorrow. As long as there is a school building in Garwood, so long will the pale, red-haired senior of each succeeding year pick up and gather around a Spotlight and relate in admiring and awed whispers tales of the Heroes of Halloween, "The Mystery of April Fool's day" and the Seniors of 1936." Even if our noble school should go the way of all "That Glory that was Greece and the Grandeur that was Rome" even then, when geologists excavate the basterisums they may still find hanging on the wall of what used to be Supt. Marshall's office a framed object from which shall be smiling the once familiar faces of the hopeful seniors of Garwood high school in 1936 A. D.—A. L. K.

Ag. Boys Report District Meeting

Garwood, Hi-Omega and Crescent will be represented at the Rosenberg district meeting Tuesday night. At a previous meeting in El Campo, Garwood won the public speaking contest; El Campo, the debating contest, and Crescent, the chapter conducting contest. Wallace Ladewig is the speaker for Garwood and we wish the teams much luck and great success.

From the Grades

The third and fourth grades really enjoyed the day in Houston last Friday. They went through the zoo and had lunch out in the park. In the afternoon they went out to the ship channel and took a thirty minute ride in a motor boat. We were glad to have Mrs. Green, Mrs. Woodruff, Mrs. Faykus, Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Lobpries, Mrs. Read and Miss Ella Schiurring to go with us.

The fifth grade is through with their history books and are now reviewing for their final exam. They are also through with their reading books and are studying in a new reader called the Laidlaw reader. They are starting a study of South America in geography.

In health and geography the sixth grade is reviewing for finals. In arithmetic we have speed and accuracy tests. Those who ranked highest are the following: Esther Boenisch, Mary Ann Minarcik, Edwin Buxkamper, Billie Lehrer. In history we are studying industries of Texas. Those who made a hundred in spelling every day last week are Mary Ann Minarcik, Florence Arnold, and Annie Lobpries.

Strange As It Seems

Vivian cuts threads with a needle.

Chalmon knows everyone—there are only three more weeks of school.

Three-fourths of the H. E. girls have finished their pajamas—Sylvia and Cleo played games in their stocking feet Friday night after they lost their shoes.—There were more boys than girls at the League picnic—The foundation for our new building has been completed.—Frederick devoted his time to blushing Friday night.—Boots finds a thrill in every glance from that girl with black curls.—The first year Spanish class has learned how to sing "LaGioldondrina."

Rosemary had a date Friday night at the picnic.—Five can ride in a one seated Chevrolet.—Lorraine has dates with Sophomores.—Who had four girls in the car with him Sunday; a load.—Freddie and Samuel were the first through with their algebra test Monday.—Whenever someone in El Campo comes to see that girl in Garwood, everyone is concerned. How about Sunday night? Lorraine had a very enjoyable time Sunday, going to two dances in one night.

Week-end Scandels

Evelyn is really blue. Vivian had better send a telegram to Houston for her.—Lorraine, did you get into some mischief at the game Sunday? or was it someone else?—Sylvia should not put all the windows up and lock the door, she might smother.—Believe it or not, Cleo likes to pick on people.—G. P. should not try to kick up high because the result is usually a pretty hard fall.—There was much on Rosie's sheet but there wasn't any other mud to be found.—Boots isn't afraid to wear all white on a picnic, he knows he won't get dirty.—Emma is undecided. She can't make up her mind.—Lucille likes glasses.—Rosemary has finally finished her pajamas. Even at that she beat some of the others.—Jim Ella looked very tired and sleepy Monday.—Freddie believes in informing people—even if they do not believe him.—Frank would make a good janitor.—Gertrude, don't you know it is very bad to play hookey, even if you have the measles.—Vivian and Evelyn enjoyed the Kangaroo Court Monday night, before and after.

Looking Backward

Items of more or less interest from the Headlight file of Twenty-Four Years ago.

MAY 8, 1912.

W. E. Welford circulated a petition last week which was signed by practically every person to whom it was presented, asking that the Southern Pacific remove its stock pens to another location.—This issue of the paper contains an advertisement, showing a large picture of a buggy, and the advertisement reads: "Two solid carloads of buggies, hacks, surreys, run-abouts and carts—nicest and niftiest line ever shown here—A. L. Baring." Mr. Baring is still dealing in transportation, but he has kept step with progress. He sells Chevrolet automobiles now.—The paper contains an article pertaining to the sinking of the Titanic, and citing the fact that the captain of this ship once lived in Eagle Lake. "At this time," the article says, when the whole civilized world is focused on the terrible disaster which befell the S. S. Titanic with its load of human freight, and the expressions of sympathy go out to the families and friends of those who so nobly and heroically gave up their lives in order that the women and children might be saved, it is natural that we should call to mind those of our friends or acquaintance who might have been numbered with the heroic band. Among those who with unselfish and patriotic devotion to the welfare of those who needed protection the most, we find the name of Capt. Edward J. Smith, commander of the vessel, the most prominent figure and upon whom the entire responsibility for the safety of the passengers rested, fully alive to a comprehension of the situation which had become so desperate, calmly giving his orders to the last and going down to his death with the consciousness of having fulfilled his whole duty. It is remembered by some of the older citizens that Capt. Smith, with two daughters and a son came here from the Bermuda Islands some thirty-five years ago, living here for a few months. That son was the Capt. Edward J. Smith who went down with the Titanic.—Albert Hahn of Columbus was a guest of his brother, H. P. Hahn, here Wednesday.—Mrs. Roy T. German, one of Nottaway's most popular women, died at her home near that place Thursday morning.—Louis P. Mysko killed a large gray wolf while destroying on the Bernard Tuesday. The wolf weighed 56 pounds.—Walter Cornelius of Houston, who with his family lived in Eagle Lake fifteen years ago, was a visitor here this week.—George Brower and family of Garwood have moved to Eagle Lake, he taking charge of the W. J. Matthews restaurant. Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Matthews will, leave shortly for a visit to Virginia before engaging in some other line of business.—B. H. Daily had had his home remodeled and improved, adding more porches and other conveniences.—Mrs. Leon D. Brown and daughter, Mrs. Gail V. Brown, one of the popular teachers in the schools here, will leave, during the latter part of the month for Minneapolis, Minn., where they will make their home in the future.—A delightful dancing party was enjoyed at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Duncan at Egypt Tuesday night.

A large and enthusiastic audience gathered at the school house Wednesday night, April 29th, to witness an effective dramatization of "The Story of Texas." Visitors came from Waco, Yoakum, Victoria, Houston, Columbus, Eagle Lake and Rock Island.

In the first part of the program, the spirit of Texas was expressed in songs and drills given by Bluebonnets, Indians, Cowgirls and Cowboys.

The second half of the performance consisted of a dramatic sketch whose scene was a Spanish hotel where the American guests were entertained by groups that expressed the historical phases of "Texas Under Six Flags." The students and the three teachers, Mrs. A. L. Chadick, Mrs. Harvey Jacobsen and Miss Kathryne Evernde were assisted by Mrs. Harvey Evernde who sang "Indian Love Call," by Mrs. M. K. Griggs, who sang in French, "Le Reve Passe," and by Mr. Jessie of Rock Island who sang with Mrs. Jacobsen the duet, "Southern Melodies."

Following the program, the graduation address was given by Supt. W. C. Reed of Eagle Lake. Certificates of regular attendance were received by Mildred and Charlie Criswell and Frances Burdick. A tenth grade diploma was awarded Harry Briscoe, who delivered a farewell address. Seventh grade diplomas were received by Harry Johnson, Amos Kincheloe, Ora Criswell, Emmett Botart and Frances Burdick. Miss Burdick was also mentioned with honor for having the highest class average of grade.

At the conclusion of the exercises informal talks were made by Coach Mitchell of Columbus and Coaches Hinton and Cheatham of Eagle Lake. Fred Sevier of Houston, who is Sheridan's first graduate, and M. K. Griggs, who spoke in behalf of the school patrons in appreciation of the efforts made by the departing teachers during their years here.

Mrs. C. L. Bliss and little granddaughter, Jane, Taylor, who spent the winter here with Mrs. E. O. Burdick and Mrs. M. K. Griggs and their families, left Thursday for their home in Saugatuck, Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Criswell and family visited friends Saturday in Hallettsville.

Mrs. Will Eaton has returned after a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Trapp, in Seguin.

Jack Davidson, who is holding drug store position at Caldwell, spent Sunday visiting friends and relatives in the city.
