ONE REASON WHY

THE R. E. STAFFORD & CO. (Incorporated) Bank of Columbus enjoys the confidence of its depositors, is because it believes in the common sense of the average farmer why his land should be assessed upon the basis of fluctuating speculation rather than upon that of average annual returns.

What the farmer wants to know, and insists upon being told, is why taxes and prices and public service are so much higher than they were when he was younger, and where his share of the prosperity is to be found.

It is hard to convince any man that he is rich when he has to sacrifice ordinary comforts to raise money for his taxes. -Galveston News.
