A severe puff of wind accompanied the heavy rain of yesterday (Friday) evening. The wind lasted for only a minute but almost every building in the town shook and trembled while it lasted. A number of windows were blown out of residences over the city and many shades were blown down. Had the twisting puff of wind blown for five minutes great damage to property and life would have been the result. The wind was no doubt the tail end of a cyclone.

To The Tax Payers of Eagle Lake and Vicinity.

We being appointed by your honorable City Council a Board of Equalization, met at the council room for the purpose of examining the assessment roll and to qualify the valuation of the property in and around Eagle Lake, did meet on the 22nd and 23rd days of June, 1908, which time the owners of the property that we considered was rendered at less than it should be, according to other property in the town, our desire and intention being to equalize and have all property assessed at its value, knowing no individual or property owner. While we may have erred in our judgment, we have done the work to the best of our ability. While we know we cannot please every property owner, we have bent to the line regardless of any individual, and have raised the valuation of no property justice told us was right. Hoping we have given general satisfaction, we are,

Respectfully,
J. E. McDONALD,
MONTE G. CRANE.

The meeting at the Christian church, in which deep interest is being felt, is now in its third week. Notwithstanding rain and threatening weather, the audiences have been large, sometimes exceeding the seating capacity of the house. There have been three confessions and four have been united by statement from other congregations. The music has been fine. The singers from all the churches in town have contributed to make the song service beautiful and helpful. All hearts are touched by the solos of Prof. Douthitt. This is the third meeting in which he has led the singing in this town. Our knowledge of his pure and consecrated life makes his presentation of the gospel in song the more effective. Many have expressed a desire to hear again the solo he sang last Sunday morning entitled, "Christ Our King." The preacher, Evangelist E. V. Spencer is a man of power. The verdict that has reached the ears of the writer is unanimous that as an expounder of the gospel and as a pulpit orator his superior has never been heard in Eagle Lake.

Last Sunday morning, Elmer Anderson, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Anderson, departed this life. The services at the home were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Causey of Lissie, his remains being interred in the Chester-ville cemetery. The deceased was a splendid Christian young man, about 19 years of age, of the type needed in every community. He gave promise of becoming one of our most capable and substantial citizens, so that we feel his departure was not only the greatest possible loss to the family, but to the entire community. They certainly have the heartfelt sympathy of every one in their bereavement.

CHESTERVILLE NEWS

Sunday, June 28th, the Chester-ville Methodist Church will be dedicated. Rev. Alexander of Austin, Texas, will deliver the Dedication Sermon in the morning and will preach again in the evening. Mr. Chas. E. Phelps of Houston, Texas, will be soloist.

The church is about completed and is considered by every one a decided credit to a community of this size. The pews in the auditorium will accommodate 160 people. In case of need the room could be made to seat 200. The church parlor will easily accommodate 40 or more. The room will be decorated with palms and flowers, making the whole pleasing and restful.

In this way, they will have the pleasure of meeting their many friends before returning to Chicago, where they expect to make an extended visit.

The Home.
I went to Washington the other day, and I stood on the Capitol Hill, and my heart beat quick as I looked at the tower. I thought of my country's capitol, and the mist gathered in my eyes as I thought of its tremendous significance, and the armies and the treasury, and the president, and the courts, and all that was gathered there, and I felt that the sun in all its course could not look down on a better sight than that majestic home of a republic that had taught the world its best lessons of liberty and justice.

I went to visit a friend in the country, a modest home with a quiet country home. It was just a simple, unpretentious home, set about with great big trees, enriched in meadows and field rich with the promise of harvest. The fragrance of the pink and the hollyhock in the front yard was mingled with the aroma of the orchard and of the gardens, and resonant with the cluck of the poultry and the hum of the bees. Inside was quiet, cleanliness, thrift and comfort. There was the old clock that had welcomed in steady measure every new comer to the family, that had ticked the solemn requiem of the dead, and had kept company with the watcher at the bedside. There were the big, restful beds and the old open fire place, and the old family Bible, flanked by the fingers of hands long since still, and wet with tears of eyes long since closed, holding the shapely angels and the consciences of the home.

Outside, the extended my friend, master of his land and master of himself. There was his old father, an aged, trembling man, but happy in the heart and home of his son. And as they started to their home, the hands of the old man went down on the young man's shoulder, laying there the unspeakable blessing of the honored and grateful father, and ennobling it with the knowledge of the Fifth Commandment. And I saw the night come down on that house, falling gently as from the wings of the unseen dove. And the old man, while a startled bird called from the forest, and the trees thrilled with the cricket's cry, and the stars were swarming in the sky, got the family around him, and taking the old Bible from the table, called them to their knees, the little baby hiding in the folds of its mother's dress, while he closed the record of that simple day, by calling down God's benediction on that family and on that home. And while I gazed the vision of that marble Capitol faded. Forgotten were its treasures and its majesty, and I said, "Oh, surely here in the homes of the people are lodged at last the strength and the responsibility of the government, the hope and the promise of this Republic." Henry W. Grady.

THINKS IT SAVED HIS LIFE.
Lester McNeilson, of Naples, Maine, says in a recent letter: "I have used Dr. King's New Discovery many years for coughs and colds, and I think it saved my life. I have found it a reliable remedy for throat and lung complaints, and would not be without a bottle than I could be without food." For nearly forty years New Discovery has stood at the head of throat and lung remedies. As a preventive of pneumonia, and healer of weak lungs, it has no equal. Sold under guarantee at Calvert's drug store, 10c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

What Makes a Home.
Did it ever occur to you that all roads lead to home?
Every avenue of enterprise has its conception in the home.

No man is considered a complete success who does not marry and make a home.
This being the case one would naturally suppose that great care and foresight would be utilized in the making of one's home.

But many men in choosing a wife confine their efforts to selecting a girl who has some knowledge of home keeping and cooking, and that is all they mean. I went to visit a friend in the country, a modest home with a quiet country home. It was just a simple, unpretentious home, set about with great big trees, enriched in meadows and field rich with the promise of harvest. The fragrance of the pink and the hollyhock in the front yard was mingled with the aroma of the orchard and of the gardens, and resonant with the cluck of the poultry and the hum of the bees. Love seldom cares to spread his snowy wings in an unclean home. There are times when illness interferes with the system of the good wife, and some dust and disorder will then accumulate, but from the house of an untidy woman happiness flees, for without love no home is perfect or hardy endurable. Without love all is discord and nothing goes right. But when two people work together joyfully, earnestly and bravely for the home, ever tender, ever true, nothing in the world can come between them and success. The Texas Stockman.

Leonard Hall and Miss Annie Profit, of Sergeant, Ky., were recently married. The groom has reached the ripe age of fifteen summers, while eleven long winters have passed in the life of the bride, who is said not to have a single gray hair in her head. The couple fell in love and did their courting while attending the district school and determined to wed. Their parents looked on the match as a "calf love" attachment and tried in every way to persuade the youngsters to wait until they attained their majority. Just before the ceremony was performed the bride was found by her mother dressing several of her dolls which she had played with since she was a baby. The girl almost broke down as she kissed the dolls good-by.
