My Wife, My Friend.

The best friend or the worst enemy any man can have is his wife. No matter how hard the toil, how disappointing the result of effort or how bitter the experience of a man may be, with a wife who is a friend in the fullest sense, home is a haven of rest to which he gladly goes, but if there is a married woman, but not his friend, at his house, he does not delight in going there, and seeks better friends at the club-room, or elsewhere. Roskin said a beautifully true thing when he wrote of a true wife, a true friend.
"Though there be no covering but the cloud-veiled sky above her, and no light save the glow within in the dew-wet grass at her feet, yet where she is, is his home," and no matter how splendid the house, and how rich its furnishings, if she is there, but not a real friend, complaining rather than helping, fretting rather than soothing and cheering, it is no home, but a splendid prison, the portals of which he dreads to enter. Wealth in millions, famous in plenty and promises of great or success count little unless there is a soul in sympathy and genuine helpful love in the home, and this is largely the cause of conditions in the guided palaces of the wealthy forming the hollow, in sincere and hurtful society of New York.

The wife who is and speaks that love in gentle, cheerful alcan make a good man out of a bad one. While a woman, but the opposite, can make a bad man out of a good one, and had the world more gentle friends at home, there would be a vast decrease in the grinding in our miserable divorce mills.

What would patient old Thomas Carlyle have been without his patient home friend, or would the charming chapters of Browning's life ever have been written but for his true friend, Elizabeth, who was his guardian angel when the great world of coldness would pass genius by without a nod of cheering recognition.

Of course no wife can be the friend of a masepline brute, but she great majority of men are as putty in the hands of the gentler sex, and if the friend is not a home, the woman will wake up some day to find that her husband has found a friend somewhere else, and then comes the fireworks, which explode in candles, sky-rockets and devil chasers, which put him on the dead run, and sometimes, he never stops. That old woman down at Jerusalem, who sent Elijah running for his life until he put 75 miles between her and himself, made an Ahab of meanness rather than a king of credit to Israel and the world, busy in developing civilization.

Herod had a wife, but a poor friend, and through her most largely he has lived in history.
To note the fact that almost all great men had great helpers in the home, in the best friend man can ever have. I have often wondered how much Mrs. Socrates had to do with his having to drink the hemlock, for Lot's wife, ruined him in inducing him to look back, and got the girls married off and Lot is not the last good farmer ruined for the work of a friend in his wife.

Job's wife no doubt enjoyed life and valued her husband when he was in prosperity, but when he became poor and afflicted, she wanted him to "curse God and die," so she could get some one else with plenty, and her sisters are not scarce even unto this day, wive who are anxious to shut equally in the profits of life but who do not propose to remain partners with the husband when the loss side of the ledger of life foots up the most.

My wife, my friend! Ah, that means something, and I can wish no man a greater blessing. She may not be very pretty, and she may not be very wise in the way of the world, but a real friend, she is a fortune to any man.— Selected.

We wonder how many of our readers have noticed the difference between the man who has been married but a short time and one who has been married several years. You can always tell a young husband from an old one. When a man has been married a few months, you will generally see him working in the garden, or fixing up about the house, and while he worships his whistles or sings, or occasionally looks up toward the window to see if any one is watching him.

A year later he is still working in the garden, but the smile has been exchanged for a frown and he occasionally looks up toward the house wondering why, in thunder dinner is not ready.

Another year rolls by and his looks would sour milk. But he is still at work, stopping occasionally to kick the dog or throw a brick at the cat. The next year we find him sitting on the front porch, smoking his pipe, while his wife does the digging in the garden. Now just watch our young men, as one by one they are caught in Cupid's net and see if this rule does not work out the problem correctly.

Nordheim View.

We are pleased to note that Miss Maid J. Allen, one of the best known newspaper women in Texas, has again entered the newspaper business, after quite an absence from active work.
She has recently purchased the Commerce Commercial, and is making that paper up-to-date in every respect. Our very best wishes are extended her.

From the campaign he is making it seems that Col. Wynne is making the race for attorney general on the demerits of his opponent, while Mr. Davidson stands for re-election on his efficiency as an officer. When are you going to vote for?

DURING the last gubernatorial contest the HEADLIGHT was "tooth and toe nail" for Campbell. This year it will cast its vote for Bob Williams. "Nuff said!"

Went For a Soldier.

At a certain police court a young hooligan was charged with assaulting an elderly man.
"Young man," said the magistrate, I'm surprised at a big, strong, healthy looking fellow like you always getting into trouble. You seem to be continually wanting to fight. Why don't you go for a soldier?"

A smile illuminated the magistrate's face when the youth replied, "I did once, Your honor, and he nearly killed me."

"It Couldn't."—
A teacher, who was instructing a class in an infant Sunday school, made her scholars finish each sentence to show they understood her.
"The idol has eyes," she said,
"but it couldn't—"
"See," said the children.
"It had ears, but it couldn't—"
"Hear," was the answer.
"It had a nose, but it could n't—"
"Wipe it," shouted the children.

The Pin.

The census bureau issues a statement to the effect that thirty-three million gross of pins was the output of this country for the year 1905. Nineteen billion pins has for many years wondered where all the pins go for nineteen billion pins is surely a stock of pins, and these figures are for the common every day pin and do not include some tons of hair pins, safety pins nor the imported article from other countries.

It takes mathematical genius to even conceive nineteen billion pins; but one has come to the front. He tells us that if we assume that the average length of pins is one inch, it appears "that in a single year we produce 19, 000,000,000 inches of pins, 1,600, 000,000 feet of pins, 320,000 miles of pins, pins enough if laid end to end to go around the world thirteen times, pins enough to make a hundred strand cable between New York and Liverpool. But why pile it up? It is enough to say that it is a duce of a lot of pins. And the whole lot cost only about $1,200,000. For the benefit of sticklers for exactness we'll say that the figures are 32,532,282 gross, valued at $1,129, 000, for the year 1905 alone.

We have to take the mathematical genius at his own figures. It is all too much for the ordinary mind, but granting that he is right it seems a bit strange that the surface of the earth isn't screwed with pins. Certainly if the manufacture of the pin keeps up proportionately for a few years longer the green foot stool of the Lord will become a mere pin cushion for the ladies.

The thing looks serious. Pretty soon we will be saying as countless as the "pins upon the earth," which will put the "sands of the seashore" and the "leaves of the trees" out of the metaphorical business and perhaps injure them as well in the sight of nature—Commercial Appeal.

BEST THE WORLD AFFORDS.

recommend Bucklen's Arnica Salve," heal every sore, burn or wound to which it is applied. 25 cents at Cal-vert's drug store."
