"HER FATAL MARRIAGE"

The Latest and Most Popular Play of the Day.

TUESDAY NIGHT: Augusta J. Evans' greatest of all Stories

"ST. ELMO"

"Edna Earl," grand-daughter of a poor but worth old blacksmith of Chattanooga, is the intended witness of a duel in which St. Elmo Murray, a young aristocrat of Georgia, kills Murray Hammond, his boyhood chum, and son of his old tutor Rev. Hammond. It afterwards transpires that St. Elmo had ample justification for seeking satisfaction under the then prevailing "code of honor" when in later years accident and ambition combine to make Miss Earl the protegee of his mother and the pet pupil of Rev. Hammond, she regards the young aristocrat with fear and aversion, based upon her belief that he is a usurper, which wealth and social position have enabled him to escape just and due punishment. For three acts thereafter it is a duel between St. Elmo and Edna, aristocrat and ambitious plebeian, the old youth versus the new, a contest complicated by their love which grows stronger through the rivalry and interference of interested persons, until it eventually overrides pride, difference in social rank and wealth, and is brought to a happy if totally unexpected conclusion on a basis mutual respect and spiritual rather than physical love. In this respect the play, while abounding in spontaneous comedy quite "in the style of the period" is not a play, but a drama of a very high intensity not surpassed by a drama since the days of the Christian.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT: Bertha M. Clay's Great Story "BEYOND PARDON."

"My Love of Olden Times," then Lady Rydell rose from the piano smiling to herself, thinking to herself, thinking that love of the olden and present, and all future time, even of the great day of doom, and through the eternity lying beyond it, would be ever the same. Taking her as she stood that moment, she was the happiest woman in the world, little dreaming as she smiles at the thought that today for her it will set forever. At last Bergett, leaning in the hall, "It's all right," says Lady Rydell, "here's a letter from Sir Lionel." She stopped to kiss the seal before she broke it. Ah, sweet lips that touch the most cruel death warrant ever written. "Elinor, when you read this, I shall be far away, you know the name of my father, the Duke of Lynne. I make no attempt to palliate my crime. It is BEYOND PARDON."

H. NUSSBAUM, "THE HOUSE OF BARGAINS" IN THE J. NATHAN BUILDING

H. Nussbaum's JANUARY CLEARING SALE!

THIS CLEARANCE SALE applies to every department in my store and is for the purpose of reducing my stock as low as possible before I get in my new Spring goods. This is in accord with my set policy to clean out my stock thoroughly each season, regardless of what sacrifices it may be necessary to make.

The merchandise I offer in this sale is good, clean merchandise. Please understand that: it is merchandise you need and can use now. I can afford to sell these goods cheap, because I would rather convert the stock into cash than take the chance of carrying the goods over until another season. Remember my motto is:

Goods must go; prices will cut no figure in this great January Clearing Sale.
