BETRAYED BY A BABY'S CRY

Eavesdropping Woman On the Party Telephone Line Got a "Hot Shot" From Her Neighbor.

The telephone, be it affirmed unan- imously, is a great institution. It be- comes a greater institution when the wires are crossed and a man's wife hears him talking to "that blonded old cat." The possibilities of the tele- phone become more complicated when a party line is used.

With these choice bits of informa- tion, the story in point can now pro- ceed.

Mrs. Blank has a party line. She and Mrs. Dash were talking and their conversation was not intended for other ears. There was nothing com- mon in the conversation.

In the midst of the conversation the cry of a baby was conveyed simulta- neously to the ears of Mrs. Blank and Mrs. Dash.

"Why, I didn't know you have a baby," exclaimed Mrs. Blank.

"And I didn't know you have one," said Mrs. Dash.

"Neither have I."

"I know that nose- old hag has been hitting to us," appended Mrs. Blank, "but I guess that-er- will hold her for a while."—Louisville Times.

"PERPETUAL MOTION" DYING

Formerly the Smooth aMn With That Idea Could Get a Hearing, but His Time Has Passed.

What has become of perpetual motion? That is a question heard fre- quently, and seldom is there a reply. There was a time when a glib-tongued man with a perpetual motion idea could get respectful hearing in scien- tific and financial circles, and if he were plausible enough, obtain finan- cial backing. Keeley, the motor man, lived in affluence for years on a per- petual motion idea attractively pre- sented to men and women who had both money and an overstock of cred- ility. Nowadays, however, the man with the perpetual motion idea is at a discount, and little is heard of him. Many persons who have studied the efforts of shrewd men to get into the pockets of the rich by using perpetual motion schemes as the golden key to wealth, have concluded that such a scheme as early as 1776 the Parisian Acad- emy of Sciences refused to receive any further schemes for perpetual motion, regarding it as an impossibility.

It was admitted "then that there had been a time when the perpetual motion problem was worthy the attention of philosophers and men of inventive genius, just as there was a time when it was an open question whether the earth was round or flat.

Let the Fairies Alone!

Another good but misguided woman has undertaken a campaign for the abolition of "Mother Goose," "Alice in Wonderland" and fairy-stories of all kinds. She declares that these stories are lies and ought not to be tolerated. In her opinion Mother Goose is worse than a witch, and as for Lewis Carroll—well, this "Mrs. Gradgrind," of Boston, would have him hanged on the highest hill. Ah, but it would be a sad old world if all the men and women in it were Gradgrinds.

If all the dear delightful tales that have to do with fairies and imps and elves and hamadryads were to be de- stroyed. The world is sad enough as it is, but it would be infinitely sadder and dreader if children did not be- lieve in Fairy Fine-Ear and mothers and fathers did not yield allegiance to the Dame o' Dreams.—Rochester Post Express.

Why They Made Her Mayor.

When the English is the first of the old towns to elect a woman at the head of municipal affairs, Mrs. Charles E. Lees, having been elected mayor. She opened playgrounds, gave eleven acres to the Sunday school and another large estate for a pleasure resort.

She is president of the National Union of Women Workers, and it was she who formed the society to make Old- ham a beautiful as well as historic town. She was some time ago given the freedom of the city, and it was with joy that the citizens found that she could serve them in the thir- dist civic office.

SHOWED DESIRED QUALITY

Young Man Obtained the Position Because He Was More Perseverant Than Twenty Others.

It is the little things that portray the boy, or the man, and it is these selfsame little things for which the employer is constantly on the alert. There was once an employer adver- tising for a bright young man. Some twenty men responded and answered his perfunctory question as to their experience and ideas of work.

"In turn he took their addresses, but without coming to any choice. The young man next in line answered his questions no differently from the others, gave his address and had reached the door when he paused, and quickly replied the employer.

"That may be true, but I want you to give me first chance."

"Why?"

"Because I have made up my mind to go into this business, and I know I can succeed in it."

"Very well, it is yours on trial."

In this case of the young man who got his job, it was simply his much to be desired quality of persistence that won him the position.

OLD CUSTOM IS ABANDONED

Last Great Campaign in Which the Colors Were Carried Into Action was Franco-German War.

It is reported that King Alfonso recently decorated the colors of a reg- iment on its return from the Riff cam- paign with the order of St. Ferdinand. The colors were carried into action, though it is a very unusual thing in modern warfare, for now-a-days to ask a man to make himself so plain a target for the enemy is like making him to commit suicide. The last great campaign in which colors were car- ried into action was the Franco-Ger- man war, in which many banner-bear- ers covered themselves with glory. Several German regiments received as a mark of distinction the right to sub- stitute the Iron Cross for the usual spike at the top of the pole. Many of the staves have silver rings round them, on which are engraved the names of the bearers who fell. At the massacre of Isandlwana, in Zululand, two subalterns of the South Wales Borderers, Melville and Coghill by name, fell in an heroic struggle to save the regimental colors. In com- memoration of their valor the Queen ordered that the colors of the reg- iment should be decorated with a sil- ver wreath.

Supply of Pulp Wood.

Just what quantity of pulp wood is now on hand in this province is difficult to state, as the estimates vary all the way from 500,000 to 1,000,000 cords.

From a personal examination along the various railway lines it seems cer- tain that south of the St. Lawrence there are at this time no less than 200,000 cords stacked up at or near the several railway stations. There may be 50,000 cords more at remote places. In the territory to the north of the river there are at least 100,000 additional cords, making a total of 300,000 and possibly much more, ex- clusive of the supply at the pulp mills required in making their pulp.

This wood supply is not controlled by a few large dealers, but is in many different hands in amounts varying from a few hundred to many thou- sands of cords.

A Lively Cause.

Some time ago a representative of the gas company decided that the gas pipes of a certain business house in Washington Court House, Ohio, was not working properly; in other words, the company was of the opinion that it was furnishing more gas than it was getting paid for, so it decided to ex- amine the meter. Imagine its surprise when it found the meter literally full of cockroaches, which had so inter- fered with the working of the meter that the gas bill amounted to $150 for a month's consumption.

When They Paid.

In the last installment of the Potash and Perlmuter stories Abe tells Mar- russ that one delinquent debtor will pay the firm sooner or later. Mar- russ retorts: "Sure, I know, Abe; and if them sooner or later fellers would pay you once in a while sooner, it would be all right."—understand, but they don't.
