Her charming personality has added a pleasure to our recent meetings, and we lose her stately, gracious presence with regret.—Contributed.

The HEADLIGHT regrets that the paper is late this week, the fault is not with the paper's force. We have had no power in the office this week caused by a break down in the machinery at the power plant, the power, with which our machinery is operated, coming on only Friday morning, then too late to even attempt to get the paper out on time. However, we have done the best we could under the circumstances, and we ask our job printing patrons to bear patiently with us for a few days until we can catch up with our work, as the absence of power the entire week has given our work a set back that will take us fully a week or more to recover from.—Editor.

A SHORT DREAM.

"I saw a dancing bubble upon the silvery surface of a restless river. For a moment it sparkled with golden light as it caught and held the sunshine glory, and I thought how beautiful it was. Then it went down. For a moment the river told where it had vanished, and then swept on without a ripple on its placid bosom. And I thought how like our lives was the bubble on the river. For a moment we sparkle in our tiny spheres, hope, toil and struggle, love and long and dream, and then go down beneath the surface forever. In a short time the tiny ripples we have caused die out, and the great river of humanity flows on undisturbed. So let us strive within our brief existence to reflect only the sunshine, not mirror the clouds above us."—Ex.

"N-no, mother, I-I shooked him first and slapped him afterward."

HE PRAYED FOR RAIN.

"Dad blamed if I don't let Providence run the weather to suit him," said the old farmer. "I prayed for rain and got it; washed away my fences, took the foundation from under my house, drowned two cows and fourteen sheep. My prayers were answered, and it teaches me a lesson not to meddle too much where I'm not posted."—Belleville Times.

A gentleman driving an automobile on a country road met an old-fashioned couple. They jumped to the ground and the auto came to a halt. The men of the car stepped off and offered to help lead the horse past the machine. "Oh, never mind the horse," said the old man, "you lead the old lady past that thing and I'll get the horse by all right."—Ex.
