WALTER ADAMS, AUCTIONEER

Letter From Mr. Westmoreland.

The HEADLIGHT editor is in receipt of the following letter from Mr. W. Y. Westmoreland of this city, who is in Scott & White's sanitarium at Temple. The letter will be of interest to Mr. Westmoreland's many friends in this section.

"I receive and enjoy the HEADLIGHT very much, and I even read all the advertisements, and judging from the amount of building going on, I will hardly know the old town when I come home. The doctors say that I am improving as fast as can be expected. They propped me up in bed today (February 17th) for the first time since the operations, which has been twenty days. I am certainly growing very tired of hospital life, but can't say when I'll be home. I am as poor as Job's turkey now and don't know what I will be if they keep me here much longer. Don't forget to send the HEADLIGHT every week."

The many friends of Mr. Westmoreland will be glad indeed to learn that he is steadily improving, and we all hope that he may soon be able to return home again. Dr. Lay states that for the past thirty years he has kept a martin box and has noted that these birds make their arrival each year between Feb. 12 and 18, and that we never have any very cold weather after their coming, and that on Wednesday of this week he noticed the birds about the box; so according to their instinctive knowledge the winter is broken. —Hallettsville Herald.

"The Flying Mercury," by Eleanor M. Ingram, which will be printed in full in next week's issue of the HEADLIGHT in addition to the regular paper, is a story that commands a public of its own. Whoever has thrilled at the sight or the thought or the whirling cars, will find his thrill recalled and renewed. Whoever has loved, will delight in this romance of the daring driver and the sweet, gentle, generous, brave and determined girl. It is a theme of the moment, love in its latest setting. Like the hero in the race that forms its climax, it breaks records for swiftness. It is love at high gear, with Cupid at the steering wheel. The story will be printed complete in the next issue. Don't miss it.

A fierce wind storm struck here Tuesday afternoon and continued to grow worse as night came on. The wind came from the North-west and at times the gusts came at a velocity of between 40 and 50 miles an hour. As the people of Eagle Lake are a little "storm shy" anyhow, many people did not go to bed until the early hours of morning when the wind had subsided. While there were no electric lights on, still lights could be seen in almost every house in town until late in the night.

Mergers seem to be the order of the day in Eagle Lake at present. While they will likely to a benefit to the town and to all concerned, still they don't exactly sit well with the newspaper business.

A Matter of Choice.
"Mary!"
Father's voice rolled down the stairs and into the dim and silent parlor.
"Yes, papa, dear?"
"Ask that young man if he has the time."
A moment of silence.
"Yes, George has his watch with him."
"Then ask him what is the time."
"He says it is 11:48, papa."
"Then ask him if he doesn't think it about bedtime."

Another moment of silence.
"He says, papa," the silvery voice announced impersonally, "he says that he rarely goes to bed before one, but it seems to him that it is a matter of personal preference merely, and that if he were in your place, he would go now if he felt sleepy!" —Harper's Bazar.
