Tips.

When attending a gathering where the absent ones are freely discussed, it is never wise to leave early.

Laugh much and loudly, and the world will surely laugh with you—provided you have wealth; but if poor, it may brand you as being half-witted.

Never propose to a girl while under the influence of soft-tinted lights and music. You may be awakened next morning by a hand organ in a drizzle.

If your name is Bill, live up to it and please your wife—come in promptly.—Judge.

No Filth no Flies.

No longer can we dismiss the fly with a contemptuous "Shoo." He is an influence to be reckoned with. Black as he is painted, we must concede him certain virtues. From a worldly point of view, he is a hustler "from way back" perpetually on the job and always delivers the goods.

He distributes samples of pestilence with a lavish hand, and the goods always match the samples whether you have ordered them or not, and are marked D. O. D.—Death on Delivery.

We may admire the fly for his industry, pugnacity and business enterprise. We may even love him—lukewarmly—as one of God's creatures, but we had better wipe him gently but firmly out of existence, just the same. Flies, like Artemus Ward's Injuns, "is pizen wherever found." He is the best traveling salesman grip, on each of his six legs and a trunk on his head. His line of samples is the most extensive, longest known, and will last you, not merely from this year to next, but from time to eternity.

A fly in the house is as dangerous as a rattlesnake, as filthy as a louse, and as disgraceful as a bedbug. The time will come when any modern, cleanly home will feel itself shamed and disgraced by the presence of a fly, and when every householder upon whose premises a brood of flies is detected will be heavily fined or sent to jail.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson.

The High Cost of Swell Living.

In passing upon a point raised in a New York divorce case, Justice Scott said that he "did not think it likely that on a salary of $7,000 a year a man would save much, if anything."

In the cost of living, New York does not differ greatly from the rest of our larger cities.

It is not long since an income of $7,000 was deemed ample to meet all the demands made on a generous purse, and provide a sufficient margin for a bank account of good proportions.

$7,000 a year commanded a high grade of ability. It secured executive capacity of the second, if not the first, order, and a lawyer or a physician with an income of this size was deemed decidedly successful. A position on the bench paying $6,000 a year was a prize coveted by lawyers. Now a judge holding such a post for the honor of it, or for the patriotic purpose of serving the public, and resisting the enticement of a corporation salary ten times as large, is by no means rare.

It is seldom nowadays that even the high-salaried official positions are sought except by men who have means of their own to enable them to "live up to their positions," or by men who have schemes of politics, or graft. The idea seems to prevail that social standing cannot be secured or retained in this country except through the lavish use of money. No doubt lots of people can secure it no other way. But there are others.

Not long ago Mrs. Russell Sage, widow of the millionaire, declared that it isn't really the wealthy people who make a display—it's the people who want to make other people think they are wealthy.

It is no doubt true that the greatest display is made not by the immensely wealthy, but by those who desire to appear so. People secure in their standing do not need to make parade of their wealth.

And after all the essential comforts of life do not cost much. The billionaire can buy few more real comforts than his coachman can.—Scimitar.

"Yey. Worst case of spoons you ever saw."

"Well, why not? That's the way it ought to be. You wouldn't have it a case of knives, would you?"

A farmer sent to an orphan home for a boy that "was smart, active, brave, tractable, prompt, industrious, clean, pious, intelligent, good looking, reserved and modest."

The superintendent of the home wrote back that, unfortunately, they had only human boys in that institution.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS

Save Their Cost Every Year of Use

If you are thinking about buying a cream separator, and have only a small amount of ready cash to invest, don't be tempted to put your money into one of the so-called, "cheap" machines.

Why pay your hard-earned money for a "cheap," trashy machine, when you can buy a reliable De Laval upon such liberal terms that it will more than earn its cost while you are paying for it.

When you buy a De Laval you have positive assurance that your machine will be good for at least twenty years of service, during which time it will save every possible dollar for you and earn its original cost over and over again.

If you purchase the so-called "cheap" separator, you must pay cash in advance and then take the chance of the machine becoming worthless after a year or two of use, to say nothing of the cream it will waste while it does last.

De Laval machines are in use than any other make. Therefore, reason. Come in and we will tell you why.

SOONER OR LATER YOU WILL BUY A DE LAVAL

Farming is a Business. Farming has become just as much a business as banking or manufacturing. No longer is the successful farmer a slipshod individual, content with sparse crops that will just pull him through the winter, but he is a man of business ability, who knows the worth of certain kinds of feed as milk, butter and flesh producers, and likely keeps books on his business as do the proprietors of any commercial business.

Men who invest their money in a farm expect a business return from their investment. The properly managed farm is a combination of a number of enterprises, each of which has a definite relation to the place or business as a unit.

The practice of keeping farm accounts is being taught now in some agricultural schools and a regular course is given. The instruction comes under the department of rural economics and consists of lectures and practice work, dealing with the general principles of accounting and its application to farm work. Such instruction is good training for the young man who expects to make farming his business, but any staid and established farmer can adopt a system of book-keeping of his own that is best adapted to the methods employed by him in his daily work.

System is a very essential attribute in a farmer in this day, when the markets exact such high grades of products and so much of them.—Globe-Democrat.

Life's Journey.

Life must be looked upon as the "experience of an immortal spirit on its travels." A journey is more enjoyable and seems more quickly ended if we do not look forward with too great eagerness to the end, but rather interest ourselves in the progress of the journey and the experiences we meet with on the way. Each day has its task, and there is real joy in noting the changing experiences as the days go by, and the abundant opportunities to do good and to get good. Life must not be a scramble for wealth and position, but the enjoyment of the beauties of the world which God has made, and the proper use of the powers and faculties with which God has endowed us. Many persons scarcely see the beauties and opportunities, so intent are they trying to get for themselves more than anyone else can get out of the world, and thus miss the things which add not one whit to the enjoyment and value of life.—Christian Observer.

A beautiful linen shower was given yesterday afternoon from four-thirty to six, at the lovely new home of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Balhorn, by Miss Gladys Welford, in honor of Miss Mary Baker Gordon, whose marriage is announced to take place on June twentieth. There was an unusually large crowd present and the bride-elect was the recipient of many pretty and handsome presents, showing the very high esteem in which Miss Gordon is held by her many Eagle Lake friends. Delightful fruit punch was served by the hostess during the evening.

The Philanthropy Class of the Baptist Sunday School met Tuesday evening with Mrs. J. E. Roberts and pleasantly surprised one of its members with a kitchen shower. While the guests were seated around the room, little Kathryn Roberts and little Hughroy Brown, dressed in blue and white, entered the room pulling a small express wagon decorated in blue and white, the class colors, and loaded with blue and white granite kitchen utensils, which they presented to Miss Mary Baker Gordon, who is soon to become a bride. The hostess then gave each one present a cup towel on which they are to work their initials. These were also given Miss Gordon. After a delightful lunch served by the hostess, the guests departed wishing Miss Gordon the very best that this life can possibly afford.

"Can I get any work around here?" said Rastus Johnson, safe in the knowledge that there was not any.

"Yes, I want you to collect a bill for me from Mr. Sawyer, the lawyer. He has owed me this bill of $20 for twenty years. If you can get the money I will give you half."

Old Rastus went to the business place of Mr. Sawyer and found him among a group of clients.

"Mr. Sawyer," said he, "Mr. Jones done told me you owed him twenty dollars for about a hundred years."

"You idiot," said Sawyer, coming over to him, "don't you see you are ruining my business? Here's a ten-dollar bill; now go on."

Rastus went back to the merchant and was asked if he got anything.

"Well, suh, I got mah half, suh, but you better watch when you go after yo's, he's right hot over it."—National Monthly.

EAGLE LAKE HEADLIGHT

The Famous Wine Tasters.

Depend upon it I always hit right and can guess to a hair. And this is all natural in me; let me but smell them, and I will tell you the country, the kind, the flavor, the age, the strength and all about it; for you must know I have had in my family, by my father's side, two of the rarest tasters that were ever known in La Mancha; and I will give you a proof of their skill.

A certain hogshead was given to each of them to taste and their opinion asked as to the condition, quality, goodness, or badness of the wine. One tried it with the tip of the tongue, the other only put it to his nose. The first said the wine savored of iron, the second said it had rather a twang of goat's leather.

The owner protested that the vessel was clean and the wine neat, so that it could not taste either of iron or leather. Notwithstanding this the two famous tasters stood positively to what they had said.

Time went on, the wine was sold off, and on cleaning the cask a small key, hanging to a leather thong, was found at the bottom.—Don Quixote.

Fine Picture Program Tonight.

The Dixie Theatre announces an extra fine picture program for tonight and Saturday night. The program at the Dixie last night was excellent. Manager W. A. Moore of the Dixie states that he is now arranging to give even a better picture program each night and that nothing will be left undone to make the Dixie's programs attractive and well worth the money. While his new and higher service will cost him considerable more money, Mr. Moore believes that the best is none too good for his patrons and he is now arranging to give the Dixie the best motion picture films that are possible to obtain.

Jonnie and his mother were dining with a friend. The first course was chicken soup with macaroni in it. The hostess watched Johnny as he sat quietly gazing into his plate. Finally she asked, "Why don't you eat your soup, Johnnie?"

"I don't care for it, please, ma'am."

"But your mamma said you liked chicken soup."

"I do like mamma's chicken soup, but she don't put the wind-pipes in."—Judge.

The Eagle Lake base ball team, the second team, left today in automobiles for Wharton, where they will play a game with the Wharton boys this afternoon.
