Flying Men Fall
Victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles just like other people, with like results in loss of appetite, backache, nervousness, headache, and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that as T. D. Peebles, Henry, Tenn., proved. "Six bottles of Electric Bitters" he writes, "did more to give me new strength and good appetite than all other stomach remedies I used." So they help everybody. Its folly to suffer when this great remedy will help you from the first dose. Try it. Only 50 cents at Calvert's Drug Store.

Will They?

When death is near, and I at last am facing the mystery which chills the hearts of men, will memories of all my money chasing bring to my soul a gentle peace again? Will mortgages and stocks and bonds and leases dispel the gloom that dims my dying eyes? Will bank books help, or teach me what true peace is, or light the water, where death's river sighs? Will comfort come from him who yearly pays me the interest on bonds or farms or ores? Will money buy the carman who conveys me o'er sobbing waves to undiscovered shores? When death is near, and I must go sailing from scenes I love, across uncharted seas and friends stand near, some cheering and some weeping, some saying to me, "Now, look pleasant, please," my heart will find no comfort in my riches, but in the thought that every now and then I've helped some fallen pilgrims from the ditches, and that I have not forgotten my men. Walt Mason.

Nothing Like It

The late Bishop Williams of Connecticut was sitting in a box in an opera house where collegiate commencement exercises were being held. The toilets of the ladies were extremely décolleté. After looking around the house with an opera-glass one of the ladies exclaimed: "Honestly, Bishop Williams, did you ever see anything like it in all your life?"

"Never," gravely replied the Bishop, "never, madam, since I was weaned."—Ex.
