The old Confederates are in Chattanooga this week "telling how fields were lost and won." Many of them are there and we deeply regret that all of the disappearing band cannot clasp hands once more on this historic ground. Lookout Mountain is there, Missionary Ridge is close by and Chickamauga can be seen from the mountain tops. These were bloody fields upon which the magazines of hell burst in those awful days when men gave up their lives for their country's cause. This is the last meeting of the ex-Confederates many will attend; in fact there will not be many more meetings for the ranks are thinning rapidly and soon the great enemy Death will sound the bugle call for the remnant of the noble band. But even when the last soldier has answered the summons of the bugle the heroic deeds of this noble race will not perish from the earth; they will live in song and story so long as hearts are thrilled by the deeds of the brave and patriotic service is counted a virtue. -Honey Grove Signal.

Things That Money Cannot Buy

Whatever may be said for or against the possession of wealth it is obvious that there are yet many things which it can not purchase, things that are as far above its reach as the heavens are above the earth and which make for the higher moral development of the race. Aside from happiness, culture, and refinement are two of the greatest blessings which money can not buy for us. Naturally the lavish expenditure of money for educational purposes such as courses at the great centers of learning and the more broadening influence of travel count for a great deal so far as our intellectual advancement is concerned but even so there are always certain other qualifications necessary for that fine degree of culture which distinguishes the man of good breeding. There are many sumptuous homes whose inmates be- lieve that the lack of culture has been made up by their manner of living as well as their intellectual poverty, while on the other hand are numbers of modest homes all over the land the greatest asset of which is a true spirit of culture. It makes no difference that the appointment of such homes are plain and shabby to the point of poverty—all that is forgotten in the charm of the refining influences which are constantly in evidence, influences which are far beyond worldly valuation and yet which come naturally to their owners.

Self Supporting Automobile

Uncle Rastus lived so far back in the beautiful wildwood, according to a story told the other evening to the Philadelphia Telegraph by Congressman Samuel J. Tribble of Georgia, that he had never ridden in an automobile. In fact he had never seen one until he recently went to town.

While gazing wonderingly at a car Rastus was invited to motor and after considerable hesitancy climbed aboard. Down the road the machine speedily whizzed, the dark some one holding fast with both hands. Safely over the hill it smoothly flew for several miles, then things suddenly happened.

Something got wrong with the steering gear and the machine headed for the nearest tree. The grass happened to be soft in that locality and nobody was hurt.

"Dat war snar som' fas' ridin' boss," remarked Uncle Rastus, as he slowly rose to his feet. "But dere am jes' one thing dat dis yeh-culled person would like to know."

"What is it Uncle Rastus?" indignantly asked the man who owned the car.

"It am des' dis boss," rejoined the perplexed Rufus. "How do yo' stop him when yo' get to a place whar dere ain't no trees?"

She Caught Him

The young girl confronted him with flashing eyes. "What did you mean," she demanded, "by kissing me as I lay asleep in the hammock this morning?"

"But," protested the youth, "I only took one."

"You did not. I counted at least seven before I awoke."

There will be a Japanese ice cream supper given by the W. C. T. U. ladies of Garwood for the benefit of the Garwood cemetery fund on the lawn between Dr. W. J. Robert's and Mr. C. K. Brodhead's in Garwood Saturday, June 7th. Everybody invited to come.

Ellis-Chew Wedding.

Mr. Olinthus Ellis and Miss Olinthus Chew were married in the presence of a few relatives and friends at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Chew, on San Antonio Street Wednesday evening at nine o'clock.

The beautiful marriage ceremony was read by Dr. Albert Buxton, pastor of the Lockhart Christian church.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis left by auto immediately after the ceremony for Luling where they look the train for Galveston. After a few days' stay in this and other places they will return to Lockhart which will be their home.

Mr. Ellis is one of the most talented members of the Lockhart bar. Nature was lavish in endowing him. His ability as a lawyer and as an orator are recognized in all South Texas or where he has tried cases before higher courts.

Mrs. Ellis is a leader in social affairs in Lockhart. She is one of the oldest and most prominent women of the city.

Hosts of friends all over Texas offer good wishes and congratulations of this union. -Lockhart Post.

The bride and groom both have many friends in Eagle Lake, both having formerly visited here, the groom being a brother of Mrs. S. O. McCarty. The Headlight offers heartfelt congratulations.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society had their Calendar Social at the residence of Mrs. P. T. Gordon Thursday afternoon, which proved a most enjoyable affair, the musical contest being very entertaining. A delicious salad and ice course was served.

Mr. Sam Cohn was a visitor to Hallettsville Thursday, returning home the following morning. The HEADLIGHT 1 year, $1.50

"HELLO!"

With a clasp on her head like a cage for her hair, She sits all the day on a stiff little chair. And answers the calls that come over the wire From people of patience and people of ire; And "Number 2" she queries of noble or churl— A wonderful voice has the telephone girl.

She has to be pleasant, and hustling and keen. With a temper untripped and ever serene. There are forty-five things she must think of at once Or some rough subscriber will call her a dunce; Since it seems a general custom to hurt— The blame for your grouch on the telephone girl.

It's wearisome work on the telephone.

A Day at a Time

It has been said that "more than half the breakdowns come from trying to live yesterday, tomorrow, next week, in the life of a day." Probably this is true. It is not the things that sap our strength so much as the things we regret, and the things we fear—in a word, the things we worry about. Many a man bends under frightful burdens of yesterday and fears the foes he may have to face tomorrow. It would not be so much if we lived a day at a time. Our failures may be weights or wings—weights when they leave us nothing but the oppressive sense of our own inefficiency; wings when they stimulate us to more earnest endeavor. To dwell upon our mistakes, our weaknesses, make us more likely to blunder on the morrow and the dread of such additional shortcomings makes the load more crushing; but to realize that our mistakes makes us richer in experience is to gain new strength for the approaching struggle. We are not physically or mentally equipped to live more than one day at a time. To consume the day's strength on yesterday and tomorrow is to make us unfit for today. "As thy days so shall thy strength be."
