READ YOUR PROOF.

Before each issue of the paper goes to press the proof reader bends over his desk and reads every line in its first printed form and with a blue pencil corrects every mistake he finds, and rarely does a single proof get an O. K. Those who place the various letters in position which form words and sentences are always in a hurry and of course errors are expected, but it is understood that the proof reader is the power behind the throne and that he will let nothing go through up-side-down, incorrect and all out of meaning. While poring over these first prints year after year, looking intently for only that which is wrong, that it may be righted, the thought has often occurred, what if each man would go over the proof of his life as he is living it day by day with the same critical eye that will be applied to this one item before you chance to read it? Would one blue pencil be enough to mark out the fallen, the times you have gone astray, and allowed yourself to revel for a season in those make-believe pleasures which invariably turn to ashes upon your lips? The chances are you would be surprised at the proof yourself in its correct form and would prefer to doubt the tell-tale pencil marks, which speak all too plainly of your wanton indiscretions. But there it lies before you, showing where you stooped to folly all too often, broke faith with yourself, your fellowman and your God. It reveals where you practiced hypocrisy with the public, broke vows with the queen of your home, deceived your children and caused yourself to believe that which is not so. As the proof of your life lies before you peruse it carefully and after making all the corrections, don't trust to anyone to make all the changes for you, but violate the rule of the printer's office and proceed to make them yourself. Then you will be a better man and always feel thankful to some one for having suggested the idea of weeding out the mistakes of your own life as you found them in the proof.—Dock Lively in Lufkin News.

Best Treatment for a Burn. If for no other reason, Chamberlain's Salve should be kept in every household on account of its great value in the treatment of burns. It allays the pain almost instantly, and unless the injury is a severe one, heals the parts without leaving a scar. This salve is also unequal for chapped hands, sore nipples and diseases of the skin. (Price, 25 cents. For sale by all dealers. Adv.)

Says an Exchanger: "If you took your little finger and then lay away your horn, There's not a soul in ten short days will know that you were born. The man who gathers pumpkins is the man who plows all day. And the man who keeps a-humping is the man who makes it pay. The man who advertised with short and sudden jerks Is the man who blames the editor because it never works. The man who gets the business has a strong and steady pull. He keeps his trade and paper from year to year quite full. He plans his advertisement in a thoughtful, honest way. And keeps forever at it until he makes it pay."

What It Won't Do. "Money won't do everything." "What now, for instance?" "It won't keep a cook who has made up her mind to quit."
