MRS. LASATER HOSTESS TO CHRISTIAN LADIES AID

The Christian Aid Society met November 18th with Mrs. W. H. Lasater. Eight members and one guest were present. The ladies were glad to meet Mrs. Lasater's friend, Mrs. E. W. Gilles. Several of the members were sick. We found our hostess comfortably domiciled in the former McClellan home. Paint and new paper made a new house of it and a very pretty one. An air of good taste and refinement pervaded every room. The dining room was a bower of greenery, potted plants, ferns, etc. Mrs. E. G. Harris opened the meeting with prayer and Scripture reading. Everyone present answered roll call with a Bible verse. This feature was unusually well done. After business session, the pastor closed with prayer. A salad luncheon was the finale. Next meeting will be with Mrs. Lewis December 2nd.

PAPER PAYS COMPLIMENT TO OUR DISTRICT CLERK

A mighty nice piece of clerical work is a transcript of 108 pages in the suit of J. B. Buffington vs. the Lakeside Irrigation Co., and others and decided in favor of the plaintiff at the last term of our district court. In this transcript are figures and figures and rule work and writing, yet the whole is without an erasure or blot, and at once stamps the party who got it up—District Clerk W. C. Papenberg—as an adept at figures and with the type writer.—Colorado Citizen.

PET DOG RUN OVER AND KILLED BY TRAIN

Mr. Conner had become attached to the old dog and felt his death keenly. Mr. Conner was on the way to get him another dog, as he can never find him. He says when "Old Wooley" lived he would always spot the dog and then he would know that Max was somewhere around.

MR. TOLIVER'S ATTRACTIVE WINDOW AT SHOP

One of the most attractive show windows ever arranged in this city can be seen at Mr. E. A. Toliver's tin shop. The window resembles an ideal bath room, with walls and ceiling tastefully papered, and lighted by a cluster of ceiling lights. The flooring is in squares of varnished pine, showing the natural grain and closely resembling a perfectly waxed floor. The room is equipped with a porcelain basin, lavatory, towel rack, and a handsome bathtub of snow white porcelain. All of the plumbing work is of nickel.

Are You Sure of What?

The man who has married the wrong woman has to fight at night in the home as well as all day in his business. He can't succeed.

The above are the words of a man who happened into my office recently.

"Go ahead," I said. "Talk to me some more."

"But just look at J—M—," mentioning a well-known New York business man. "He is only thirty years old." Before he is forty he will have a national reputation.

"And why? Because he is any smarter than the rest of us?"

"No! A thousand times no!"

"It is because his wife is smarter than our wives."

"She knows when to talk and when to keep still."

"And when to do both."

"She never said a discouraging thing to him in her life."

"She never thinks a discouraging thing about him."

"She is so confoundedly sure he can do anything in the world, that he leaves home every day with a grin of confidence, bound to win."

"If he comes home at night having forgotten everything she asked him to do for her downtown, do you suppose he begins to worry at the gate about how she will reproach him?"

Not on your life.

"He knows that she will say something like: 'How could you remember when you already had too much to do anyway?'"

"It makes me feel good just to see those two meet in the evening. I get him to take me home to dinner for the inspiration of her handling of him."

"There aren't many women like that. If there were there wouldn't be so many divorces."

"It is my experience that a wife is supposed to carry a man to success on her own grit and nerve."

"But it's a great deal more wrong to expect a man, on his own grit and nerve, can carry a worrying business and a worrying wife. His mind is never keyed right."

"A worrying wife is not a successful wife, and the husband of a worrying wife is not a successful man. Unless—but we'll leave that out. It's too unpleasant to consider, and it doesn't represent a large class of successful men."

"I'll say, and say it reverently, God pity the man with the wrong woman."—The Delineator, September Number.
