How He Fought The Boll Weevil

Mr. G. M. Manor, a merchant and planter of Anding, a few miles south of Yazoo City, has made a discovery that enabled him during the last season to make a splendid crop of cotton probably the worst infested boll weevil section of the country.

Success of his plan that it is the hope that the damage by reason of the weevil infestation may be reduced to a minimum.

Mr. Manor's plan was to attack all the plows as soon as the cotton is ready to work, agony sack or other heavy cloth, saturated with the following mixture: Lubricating oil, 1 gallon; moth balls 1 pound; boll together and then add 1 pint of tar, and mix with 5 gallons of coal oil.

The sacks are saturated with this mixture and attached to the single trees, and as the plowing is done the sacks drag automatically over the plant. The fumes of the mixture are very obnoxious to the weevil, and as the fumes stay on the plant a long time, the pest will not attack the plant. As the crop is plowed

Mr. Manor also takes the precaution not to use any cotton seed that has been raised on the place the previous year. His idea is that some weevil hibernates in the old seed, and in this way some are kept alive and perpetuated in the new crop. By buying new seed from some section where the boll weevil does not exist, he thinks the danger of weevil infestation is reduced considerably.

Mrs. W. D. Walker passed through the city yesterday from Giddings en route to Hot Springs, Ark., with Master Pryor Simmons who was taken ill while at Giddings with the Eagle Lake ball team. His mother, Mrs. R. S. Simmons, is at Hot Springs.

Plan to Destroy the Boll Weevil.

While in the Alamo City one day during the past week, S. V. Houston, Floresville's progressive mayor and one of our county's most influential citizens, was introduced to a well known farmer from near Devine. While discussing crop conditions, the Medina county planter advanced a plan for destroying boll weevil which appealed very much to Mr. Houston and it seems very practicable. The gentleman stated that last year his section was greatly damaged by the weevil. Many farmers made almost a complete failure. When his cotton was very young, just before it began to square or shortly afterwards, he plowed it with a cultivator. About two feet ahead of the shovels he placed a brush or rope and in this manner knocked off a countless number of the weevils. They were buried under the soil turned up and he says it makes no difference whether the soil is wet or dry—the weevils are covered and there is no chance for them to escape. This plan was adopted by many farmers, who failed to adopt his simple suggestion, made a failure.

Mr. Houston was greatly impressed with the plan and says other cotton men and farmers whom he has told of the idea, are of the opinion that it is very practicable. At any rate it costs nothing to try it and it may prove a great help to many farmers. There is no doubt but that we have weevils here and we should be willing to try almost anything that will destroy them.

The Chronicle Journal is anxious, and at all times, willing to print items that will be of any help to the farmers and our columns are open for their benefit.—Floresville Chronicle.

Why can some people jam a bit of bait carelessly on a hook, fling it into the water and draw up a mess of big fish, while others, fishing scientifically, can't even catch a minnow.

We are told there is a reason for everything—a logical explanation for everything.

Who will stop modesty forward and explain that world-old mystery known as "Fisher's Luck?"

Fisherman's Luck

"Fisherman's luck"—what is it? The average man loves to fish. Perhaps more men like fishing than any other sport. Yet more men know less about fishing than about anything else.

And no man can have done much fishing without realizing that there is an unsolvable mystery—in fact, there are several unsolvable mysteries—connected with it, says the Milwaukee Sentinel.

For example: Two men sit in opposite ends of a boat. They are using precisely the same tackle, bait, etc., and are fishing with equal skill. One of them will catch a dozen fish. The other won't have a bite.

Let them change places and change rods. The lucky man still catches. The unlucky man doesn't. Why? Sometimes a man who is lucky at fishing today will have no luck tomorrow, and vice versa. On the other hand (seemingly apart from any special, some men are lucky at fishing all the time, while others are absurdly unlucky. Why? Why do fish bite least just before a thunder storm and best just after one? Why do they bite better in warm weather than in cold, in cloudy rather than in sunny? Why do they bite least when the wind is to the north and best when it is south? And why can some men catch fish in a northwest gale when others can't even catch them on a warm, showery day in the dark of the moon.

Why can some people jam a bit of bait carelessly on a hook, fling it into the water and draw up a mess of big fish, while others, fishing scientifically, can't even catch a minnow.

We are told there is a reason for everything—a logical explanation for everything.

Story of a Famous Poem.

Woodman, spare that tree: 'Tis not a single tree: 'Tis a forest of trees: And I'll protect it now.

Many of us may not know the circumstances which caused the familiar poem to be written. George P. Morris, the author of this famous poem, gives the history of its origin in a letter to a friend, dated February 1, 1837.

Living out of town a few days since with a friend, an old gentleman who had spent many years in travel in foreign countries, he invited me to turn down a little woodland pass. "Your object?" I inquired.

"Merely to look once more on an old oak tree planted by my grandfather long before I was born, under which I used to play when a boy, and where my sisters played with me. There I often listened to the advice of my parents. Father, mother, sisters are all gone now; nothing remains but the old tree.

"I never ride out but I turn down this lane to look at this old tree. I have a thousand recollections about it. I always greet it as a familiar and well-remembered friend. There it is."

"Near the tree stood a man with his coat off sharpening an ax. "You are not going to cut that tree down, surely?" said my friend.

"Yes, I am," replied the woodman.

"What for?"

"I want the tree for firewood."

"What is the tree worth to you for firewood?" inquired the old man, choked with emotion.

"Ten dollars after it is down," replied the man.

"If I give you that sum will you let it stand?" said my friend.

"Yes," replied the woodman.

"You are sure of it?"

"Positive."

"Then give me a bond to that effect."

He went into the cottage in which my friend was born, now occupied by the woodman. I drew up the bond. It was signed and the money paid over.

As we left the cottage the daughter, a young girl, assured us that while she lived the tree should not be cut.—Hingham (Mass.) Journal.

MANY RUINED LIVES

Hundreds can point to the use of calomel as the cause of physical decay. Its strenuous effects upon liver, kidneys and even the heart are known to every practicing physician.

Medical science has found a vegetable compound that eliminates the poisons from the liver and accumulation from the bowels in a safer and saner way than does calomel and leaves no ill after-effects.

This remedy in the form of GRIGSBY'S LIVER-LAX is a proven success. It is for sale in 50c and $1.00 bottles by Eagle Lake Drug Company who guarantees to refund purchase price if you want it. It is all protected by the likeness of L. K. Grigsby.

As we have charge of the Eagle Lake Steam Laundry again, we have secured the services of Mr. Albert Olayess, one of the best laundrymen to be had. He has been connected with the large laundries of Chicago, Houston and San Antonio and we solicit your inspection of the grade of work being turned out and see if we are not entitled to your support, instead of some foreign town that is not interested in the welfare of Eagle Lake or its people.
