TO A LITTLE BOY'S FATHER

Samuel W. Irwin, in Zion's Herald. He's filling the place with his clatter and din.

"The everlasting tum-tum of his drumming. But I'm sure your heart in the days that are here. And he's yours in the days that are coming."

"You're getting too busy to play with the lad. Remember this—that same time you shall run it. When his feet are once set on the far-leading trail. I'll ascend you how fast he'll pursue it."

But today while it's here, yours the choice among them all. He's your slave; he attends like your double. Every muscle and nerve, every beat of his heart.

"You may own through his frolic or trouble. The green is wide—there are places to swim. Build sand houses and play on the shore. And the new light that beams in the face of your boy. Will run through your heart with its single tingle."

And today he's more precious than price of steel. On a turn in the tables of trading. He'll be prophet or maybe a king. Through his now in a circus parading.

While his battle-flag waves at the head of the line. The bellows reveal his drumming. I'll be sad if in marching he passes you by. Till you're strangers in days that are coming.

CLODBURSTS FALL LAST WEEK IN LOUISE SECTION

"Four Wharton Spectator." The oldest settlers of Louise can't remember another time when the Mustang Creek went as wild as it did Monday night and Tuesday morning. Two inches of water fell within a two hour period in the Louise section Monday night, and as a result the Mustang went on a rampage that is not comparable to any rise ever seen on the creek.

Tuesday morning the Mustang was fully five miles wide and was cutting like a mountain stream in the surrounding. Cows, horses, chickens and turkeys were swept to destruction as the flood waters fell within a few hours. The flood of Louise was a great volume when it came to the Mustang Creek.

The Mustang Creek had been cutting its way down the hillside for many years, but the flood of Tuesday morning was a great volume when it came to the Mustang Creek.

"Well, my little son," remarked the minister, "I suppose you always do as your mother tells you."

"You bet I do," replied little Billy. Then he added, "So does father."

Why Gulf makes a new Gas for June

JUNE—MONTH OF BRIDES... and the month when summer officially starts. Gulf is on the job with a new summer gas—because unless your gasoline is "Kept in Step with the Calendar" it can't give you the best mileage... a part of it blows out of your exhaust as soon as it's burned.

Every gallon of Gulf Gasoline you buy in June is specially refined for summer driving—so that all of it goes to work, none of it goes to waste. Try a tankful!

After the fire of 1906 had swept the homes from the crest of Nob Hill, San Francisco, the cornerstone was laid there in 1910 for the Cathedral of St. John the Evangelist. This partially constructed, 340-foot edifice is being built chiefly of steel-reinforced concrete. The light cross on its central tower will be the highest point on the city skyline, and visible for miles to ships quivering San Francisco Bay.

Other cathedrals being projected in the United States are St. Philip in Atlanta, Georgia; Trinity in Detroit, New Jersey; St. Mark's in Seattle and the partly finished St. John the Evangelist, in Spokane, Washington.

Spain is building two new cathedrals. In the suburbs of Madrid have been built the foundations and shrine of St. Alphonso, in Barcelona, the shrine and two towers of La Sagrada Familia have been completed.

England, home of many ancient cathedrals, is still building them. An Anglican cathedral that will take its place with the largest in the world is being erected in Liverpool. Situated on the James Street, this huge Gothic structure, dedicated to St. James, will be 400 feet long and its large central tower, 97 feet square, will rise 308 feet above floor level. Its foundation stone was laid in 1914 by King George V.

20 years in building a War Memorial chapel contains an illuminated vellum Roll of Honor on which are inscribed names of the nearly 40,000 Liverpool men who perished in the World War.

Brownlow Hill, Liverpool, has been chosen as the place for an immense Roman Catholic cathedral, in which 10,000 worshippers will be able to see the high altar at the same time. On the site where the foundation stone was laid in June, 1935, will be a massive domed brick structure, probably of the Renaissance period. It is expected that it will take at least 20 years to build.

Still another cathedral is being built in Bradford, England. In Victoria, British Columbia, Christ Church Cathedral was completed in 1932. It is 365 feet long, topped by a tower 185 feet high. In the south aisle, children's eyes may wander to the robor and its feet carved in stone on the capital of one of the columns. It commemorates the crucifixion of a pair of robbers that during construction of the building, nested and reared their young on the scaffolding, unafraid of the workmen.

On the other side of the globe, British cathedrals are singing in St. George's Cathedral, Capetown, South Africa, the foundation stone of which was laid in 1901 by the Duke of York, now King George V. In this French Gothic building of yellow stone, the windows are narrow and placed high to avoid glare of the African sunshine.

In Nairobi, capital of Kenya Colony, East Africa, the Cathedral of the Highlands is being reared. Built of locally-quarried bluish-gray stone, it is the addition of its twin towers.

In Suva, Fiji Islands, a site has recently been purchased and plans are being drafted for an Anglican cathedral.

"Christmas night, 1932, saw the dedication in La Paz, Bolivia, of a cathedral which has been under construction for nearly a century. Its organ, with 1,000 pipes, is said to be the largest in South America."
