FEW CAN OUT-GAMBLE THE AMERICAN FARMER

If you can return a foolproof answer to the question, "How is the farm belt going to vote this fall?" the southerners of both parties will shower honors upon you and call you blessed.

Doping out the farm vote has too many angles for the peace of mind of the rival vote-getters. Will the farmer feel grateful for the things the AAA did for him, or resentful over the things it failed to do? Will the angry drought turn him against the administration, or will the drought-relief program turn him toward it?

You can get as many answers to such questions as there are political prognosticators. The whole proposition is a pure gamble. And that, after all, is only fitting. For the farmer himself, by nature the most conservative and level-headed of men, is engaged in a life-long gamble, in which he bets his livelihood every year.

He has to gamble first of all on the weather. Will there be a drought this year, or is there to be plenty of rain? Will there be a late frost in the spring to ruin his corn crop—or an early one in the fall to lay it low before he can get it marketed?

He has no way on earth of knowing all he can do is lay his money on the line and hope for the best. He must gamble with the insect world. Will the corn borer advance upon his fields—or the army worm, the boll weevil, the ifyworm, the grasshopper, the chinchbug, or some other pernicious destroyer? The farmer won't know until the time comes. Meanwhile, he must go ahead with his planting and cultivating, his labor, and his money that these pests will leave him alone.

He must bet, too, on what all the other farmers are doing. If he votes a good share of his acreage to potatoes, he is betting that there are not enough other farmers doing the same thing to knock the bottom out of the potato market; if he raises wheat, he is betting that faraway places, such as Russia and the Argentine, will not bring forth the same grain too bountifully.

He is even betting on the general level of prosperity, both at home and abroad. If it is good, he stands to make a good income; if it turns bad, he stands to make a poor one, or possibly not to make any at all.

It is betting that money will remain fairly easy, so that his bank will give him the time he needs on that mortgage.

In all, he is betting that the whole complex chain of unrelated events which makes the difference between a good year and a bad one will operate in his favor. He has been having that bet every year since he became a farmer, and he will go on having it until he ceases to be one.
