THE ARCHIVES OF BEXAR

When Business of the Texas Government, From 1727 To 1835, Was Centered In San Antonio.

Note: This is one of a series of articles taken from the three hundred special collections of family archives in the University of Texas Library. The collections cover all periods of Texas history, from the earliest days of the Spanish missionaries in the province of Texas, through the colonial era, to the present. This series of articles presents interesting excerpts from a number of these family collections, some chosen for their intrinsic significance in the development of the empire of Texas, others for their purely human interest in portraying personalities, economic conditions and social intercourse.

The old maxim anent the prophet without honor in his own country was proved by execution in the case of Oran M. Roberts, distinguished at home and throughout the country as a jurist, it is evident from confidential letters in the Roberts Papers, now reposing in the family archives collection of the University of Texas Library.

As early as 1854 oranges and lemons were being grown in Galveston and perhaps on the adjacent mainland, according to mention of these fruits in the diary of William Pitt Bollinger, prominent attorney of that city. That year opened with a severe freeze and caused him to express fear that damage to the fruits had been done. Bits of information concerning local bickerings over the establishment of the cotton office in Galveston and on matters of minor military importance are contained in Bollinger's daily notations. On January 1, 1854, he wrote:

"Very hard freeze last night and cold today. I fear our fruit trees in Galveston are killed—oranges, lemons, etc. This will be a great calamity in our garden.

"Went to town only a short while. Finished a long letter to Bryan—in which I dealt with entire frankness in reply to his letter—told him that from any one else I should consider it inconsistent with respect to friendship—that his proneness to misconstruction, suspicion and distrust rendered intimate and thorough friendship with him if not impossible yet requiring a toleration and forgiveness which I often find and that but for my knowledge of his really genuine and noble qualities which had endeared him to me sincerely I should tell him it would be the last occasion he should have to disturb me with exaggerating my services in any thing with which he was connected. How he will take it I don't know; but it is best to be candid. I love Bryan, but he tries my patience sorely.

"Lucy & Betty have gone to a party at Sampson's. Read Rochefaucult's Maxims about 16. Mrs. Jack & Hally this evening. I hope to journalize regularly. Find spend my time as I ought."

Cotton and its price were subjects of discussion then, just as they are today. Mention is made of a record-breaking cold spell. On January 11, the diary reads:

"Mr. and Mrs. McKinney left this morning. Their visit was very pleasant to us while its length has been so disagreeable. Few persons love us better than Mr. McKinney. He has many noble traits of character—some obvious faults, but his virtues greatly predominate. W. J. Hutchins well said that 'Nature made him a very honest and very good man.'

"Last night Hutchings, sent for me. Magruder has retaken that part of his order establishing the cotton office which gives Hutchins discretion as to obeying his orders—and a note to him demanding an answer in writing whether he will carry out his contract with House. McKinney also told me that Magruder said the Cotton Board would find themselves under arrest very soon if they didn't mind. It looked like he was determined to force an issue. I wrote the reply—expressing in the strongest terms their views of the impolicy of giving House cotton at 4 cents as the market value when it was worth 12½ cents—and enquiring if he demanded a more explicit answer, whether he recognized the rightful authority of the office to a voice in determining the price—or considered Hutchins a subordinate, bound to obey his orders—and "it was resolved that Hutchins and I should pay him a visit. We did so today and remained with him several hours. He promptly disclaimed his order to Hutchins as in the light of a military order requiring obedience—saying that he only intended to elicit the reasons for the refusal of the office so as to lay the whole subject before Gen. Smith. They had a great deal of conversation, and of a very satisfactory character. He sent for House and I think terms will be agreed on between him and this office tho House has influenced and is unscrupulous. On the whole I think our visit will prove useful.

"It was the first time I was ever in his company or called on him. He as several times talked of me very kindly, and requested me to call. He converses and bears himself very finely. His face reminds me of Jo Love.

"The weather has been the longest continued cold spell I have ever known in Texas. It has frozen I believe every night since Wednesday 30th December until last night and is now damp muddy and very disagreeable.

"Yesterday and last night I stood guard again.

"I have not worked very effectively—has been too disagreeable without fire in my office. Gen. Wm. J. Kyle is dead—a useful and good man for whom I felt very true friendship."

The diary record of January 17 reads:

"My cold has been so distressing—verging on pneumonia or bronchitis that I remained at home Friday and Saturday. Last night Sorley and Ball came out and laid the papers before me relating to the seizure of 15 mils of Treasury notes by Milme & Co. in Monterey. General Smith has transmitted all the papers on the subject to the Cotton office. Sent a blank letter of appointment naming Judge Devine & McKinney but authorizing Hutchins to fill up the other names and to communicate to Devine & McK instead of Magruder seemed, to me in bad taste and that Magruder could do not except to it positively yet feel that it should not have been arranged in that way.

"A long letter from Col. Loye in regard to my letter to Bates in which I told him I had been responsible for the safety of Murray's life etc. Bates, thinks this either a threat or an effort to tamper with his integrity. The most ridiculous piece of prudery upon his officiality I ever heard of. I wrote him familiarly in a posterio to a business letter just as I would have said Don't shoot any client—save his life etc of course not presuming that he would suppose for a moment it was a serious proposition but only a wish to be regarded no otherwise than with such weight as he would give if any to a knowledge of my convictions.

"The fact is Bates own pride of importance whenever he can bring them in play override all other feelings. I have befriended him more than any man in the world—yet he threatens to put this letter before the court as an insult to it, for it to protect its dignity by proceedings against me! I shall never have the kindness towards him I have always had.

"Long letter from Guy, disclaiming the construction I put on his letter. Says he thought it was the third week not the first of his stay here—when we were waiting for replies from Shreveport—and he only meant to regret that that week he had kept me from work. This still leaves me as claiming to be aiding him, when he thought I was not doing it. Again he says he alluded to the advantages I had gained outside from 'appearances' because I attached more weight to appearances than any one of my genly well balanced mind he knows. He has often wondered at it. His heart is open to a fixed opinion—friendship that I will only regard him with equality as well as affection.

"He does not deal frankly about his letter. No doubt he has given me credit as he says—but at the moment thinking I was assuming it his jealousy and suspicion got the better of him. Compensating me by 'appearances' meaning to touch my tender point is rich!

"Is there any truth in his remark that I look to 'appearances'? I had never suspected it. On the contrary have considered myself peculiarly free from such a weakness."

Gum-Dipping not only strengthens the cords but prevents heat inside the cords, where it insulates the tiny fibers against friction, and protects Firestone High Speed Tires from blowouts.

This heavy, broad, traction and non-skid tread is held to the cord body of the tire with Two Extra Layers of Gum-Dipped Cords, a patented construction, making the cord body and tread an inseparable unit.

NO SWERVE LEFT — NO SWERVE RIGHT

The angles in the scientifically designed Firestone High Speed tread are so placed as to stop a car quicker and without sideswerve. Its super-traction and non-skid efficiency have also been proved in the famous Pike's Peak Race where for eight consecutive years it has been used on the winning cars.

THE JOKESMITH

Some few made, mostly stolen, some merely borrowed. If you run across a good one, mail it to us.

Dentist—There's no hope. I must kill that nerve.

Patient—Please, not that! It would ruin me—I'm a book-agent.

Mugg: "Most women have a keen appreciation of humor."

Tuck: "Yes, the more you humor them the better they dot it."

Jones—My wife talks to me jokingly awful.

Smith — That's nothing. Mine talks to me awfully.

Tramp—"Lady, I'm almost famished."

Housewife—"Here's a cent. But how did you fall so low?"

Tramp—I had a wife, too. I was too extravagrant."

Hubby: "If there was any darned fool in love with you before we got married, I'm sorry you didn't marry him."

Wifey: "I did marry him."

Bonesel—Do you believe the auto is the ruin of young men?

Tripp—No; but I know most young fellows don't do an auto any good.

Customer: "How can I tell whether I have dandruff or not?"

Barber: "Place suspicious particles on piece of paper. If they walk away, you do not have dandruff."

Boy: "Mother, do you believe in love at first sight?"

Mother: "Of course. Do you suppose I would have married your father if I had taken a second look at him?"

Editor—We wouldn't even think of printing such stuff as that.

Author—You needn't be so stuck up about it. You're not the first one to refuse it.

Sense—Did Marietta make you feel at home when you called on her last night?

Darrell—No; but she made me feel like I ought to be.

Martin—So you refuse to marry me? On second thought, it is just as well. I guess you are too old for me.

Helen—Wait a minute. Perhaps I was too hasty in my decision.

"What did you do when you met the train robber face to face?"

"I explained that I had contributed to the ticket seller, the red cap, the dining room waiters and the sleeping car porters, and borrowed $5.00 from him."

Doctor—What you need is rest.

Government Clerk—But I can't afford to go away.

Doctor—You don't need to. Just stay at the office a couple of hours more every day.

"Isn't it striking what difference wealth can make in appearance?"

"Yes. For instance, everybody speaks of that rich Miss Thinleigh as being divinely tall; but if she were poor she would be lean and lanky."

Elsie—What kind of luck did you have in court?

Margaret—The worst kind. The jury awarded me a thousand dollars from that fellow who kissed me, but he didn't have the money and now everyone else is afraid to kiss me.

Aunt Mary—Have you named the baby yet?

Mrs. Cooney—No; we have to be very careful in selecting a name because so many people will want to name their children after her when she grows up and gets to be president.

Delph—What happened to you and the school teacher. You said you were going to marry her.

Knight—Well, I got thinking what a job it would be to write, "I must be home by 10 o'clock" a hundred or so times every time I came home late.

Teacher: "Johnny, what is the name of the principle river in Egypt?"

Johnny: "The Nile."

Teacher: "That's right. Now, Tommy, you may name the Nile's smaller tributaries."

Tommy: "Juveniles."

Little Johnnie had been spatting with his mother all the morning. Finally his mother exclaimed: "I guess I know a few things."

Little Johnnie put on an injured tone and said: "Well I guess I know just as few things as anybody."

He took her hand in his and gazed proudly at the engagement ring he had placed on her finger only three days before.

"Did your friends admire it?" he inquired tenderly.

"They did more than that," she replied. "Two of them recognized it!"

"Let me kiss those tears away, sweetheart." Jimmie begged, tenderly. She fell into his arms and he was very busy for some moments. But the tears flowed on. "Can nothing stop them?" he asked breathlessly.

"No," said Frances; "it's hay fever; but go on with the treatment."

Two truck drivers were involved up in the traffic of a busy street. One of them losing his good nature yelled out: "Why don't you look where you are going, you pie-eyed, slankety, blank, blank?"

The other replied politely: "You're nice looking too."

Hotel Manager—"I caught the bellhop standing on a chair looking through all the transoms."

Guest—"Did you fire him?"

Hotel Manager—"Sure! The transoms were strong enough to hold both of us."

Said the chairman of a certain society at its annual meeting: "In most kindred associations half the members of the work while the other half does nothing. In this society over which I have the honor to preside it is just the reverse."

The hostess was talking to one of her guests as the two sat on the lawn listening to a chimes recital.

"Beautiful, aren't they?" remarked the hostess.

"Pardon?" inquired the guest.

"I say, they're beautiful aren't they?"

"I'm sorry," roared the guest, "but I can't hear a word for those damned chimes."

The judge who was about to deliver a severe sentence, looked at the defendant in the dock and began: "This robbery was consummated in an adroit and skillful manner."

The prisoner blushed and interrupted: "Come now, your honor. No flattery, please."

A red headed man met a bald headed man on the street one day. The red headed man said: "Huh! There don't seem to have been much hair where you came from."

"Oh, yes," replied the bald headed man, "there was plenty of hair, but it was all red, and I wouldn't have it."

The bride of a few weeks noticed that her husband was depressed.

"Gerald, dearest," she said, "I know something is troubling you, and I want you to tell me what it is; your worries are not your worries now, they are our worries."

"Oh very well," he said. "We've just had a letter from a girl in New York, and she's suing us for breach of promise."

Having been away for some seven or eight years, Morrison decided to pay a visit to his home town in Minnesota. Recognizing none of the hangers-on at the depot when he arrived, he rushed inside to greet the ticket agent, a friend from childhood. All smiles, he extended his hand. "Hello, Fred," greeted the other. "Goin' away?"

A young lawyer from the North sought to locate in the South. He wrote to a friend in Alabama, asking him what the prospect seemed to be in the city for "an honest young lawyer and Republican." Laconically the friend wrote: "If you are an honest lawyer, you will have absolutely no competition. If you are a Republican, the game is also protected."

He: "Now that we are married, perhaps I might venture to point out a few of your little defects."

She: "Don't bother, dear. I am quite aware of them. It was those little defects that prevented me from getting a much better man than you are."

"I want to know," said the grim-faced woman, "how much money my husband drew out of the bank just before Christmas."

"I can not give you that information, madam," answered the man in the cage.

"You're the paying teller, aren't you?"

"Yes, but I'm not the telling payer."

An owner of a fine estate having a small lake within its boundaries was much annoyed one day to find a stranger fishing along the water's edge. "See here," he said, "I own this water and I stocked it with bass at my own expense. I won't have you fishing here."

"That's all right," replied the stranger calmly as he put some more bait on the hook. "I'm not fishing for bass; I'm fishing for perch."

CHEVROLET APRIL SALES SET ALL-TIME NEW HIGH

Chevrolet dealers' car and truck sales in April totalled 134,431 units, setting a new all-time high mark for any single month in the company's history, W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co., announced. Sales for the year to May 1, totaling 406,620, set a new all-time record for the first four months of a year.

The achievement followed close on a record-breaking March, which, with April, figures were in stood as the greatest single month Chevrolet ever experienced.

April sales represent an increase of nearly 35 per cent over sales in April, 1935, which totalled 99,811. The first four months' sales were an increase of 48 per cent over those of 1935 which were 274,121.

Sales of used cars in April totalled 197,270, Mr. Holler reported, producing a total of 679,104 used car sales for the first four months. Both these figures represent new all time highs. The greatest previous single used-car month in the company's history was March 1930 when 174,542 units were sold, and the greatest corresponding four-months' period was in 1930, when sales totalled 456,538.

"All phases of the dealers' business showed an increase," Mr. Holler said. "Whether considered from the standpoint of total unit sales, of truck sales or of used car sales, April set a record new mark. Heavy volume of used car business contributed to the new-car results. Keeping dealers' inventories advantageously low."
