$3,12,000 Fed. Aid In County

How well has Colorado County been making out, compared with communities in other parts of the country, in the amount of Federal funds received via grants-in-aid and revenue sharing? Of the $42.9 billion that was distributed in the past fiscal year, how much went to the local level?

Based upon a study by state analysts—made up by the Tax Foundation, a non-profit research organization that watches over government association and spending, Colorado County collected a relatively small share in the year.

It received approximately $3,120,000 through the combination of revenue sharing and grants-in-aid, according to a breakdown of the Tax Foundation's figures.

The total amount allocated to the state of Texas as a whole came to $2,540,000,000, less $1,000,000,000, on the strength of state and local contributions.

The grants were made to help the state and its communities with their expenditures for highways, education, urban renewal, public assistance, health care and the like.

Also considered in the study was the cost of these benefits to the communities. They are paid for out of Federal income and excise taxes that are collected from local residents and assigned to the aid program.

Committee reports were given as follows: Share the Faith chairman, Clara Lopez, read a short poem, "A Mother."

St. Anthony's reported that they have mailed seven parishes and seven sympathy cards. Charity and Social Service chairman, Millie Schurring, reported that she will be in charge of the St. Mary's Library Memorial cards for the summer months.

Entertainment chairman, Cecilia Krenk, read the hosts for the June meeting. Ways and Means committee reported that the Pre-Mothers' Day bake sale was a very big success.

Celestine Ammann read a very good prayer on modesty in dress.

The Catholic Daughters honored all the parish graduates in the eighth grade, seniors of Rice and El Campo. Refreshments were served by the hosts.
