Editorial FULL OF EXCUSES

If we are old enough to have a job, drive a car or pedal a bike, decide what to eat for breakfast (or whether to eat at all) and what we ought to stand behind our teacher. Isn't it tiresome to hear students say things like: "I could have been a great dancer but my mother, etc., etc." or "I don't like living here. I would be happier in a grotto or the mountains, etc., etc., etc."?

If we can't get to school and on time and do a good job when we get there, perhaps we should pause and think a little.

What is it we can't do? Take a piece of paper and write down all the things we can't do.

Let's try to check off the things something can be done about--like the alarm clock, breakfast, the car or bus, or maybe just moving a little faster. Do we need help with these?

Now, how do we feel? Better?

It's an old pattern, but we know it is not the fault of another person. After all, we are not slaves. If we fall a test, it is not anyone else's fault.

These camps offer instruction in Spanish, French and Russian. Expert instruction is provided for beginners, intermediate and advanced students. Nonresident foreign language experience is necessary.
