THAT'S A FACT

Accident Toll In Area $4,437,000

For the average Colorado County resident, what are the chances of going through an entire year without having an accident of some sort?

Are local people more likely or less likely to be involved in a traffic accident or a home accident than those in other communities?

According to the latest government statistics, covering the entire country, local residents are more accident prone than the average.

The findings are based upon data compiled by the U. S. Public Health Service, in connection with its annual vital statistics survey, and upon reports from the National Safety Council.

Covered were all accidents in which Colorado County people were involved, wherever they took place, including those that occurred while driving, while at work, in the home, or while swimming, boating or hunting. Not included, however, were local accidents affecting non-residents.

Taking into account the Government's last three annual reports, it appears that there has been an average of 77 fatal accidents per year in the county. Motor vehicles were responsible for 13 of them.

In terms of population, the annual toll in the area was at the rate of 97 fatalities per 100,000 people during the three-year period.

It was a somewhat higher rate than was found in most other communities in the United States, where the average was 55 per 100,000. In the West South Central States it was 67.

The National Safety Council's latest figures show a big drop in the overall death toll from accidents, resulting in a saving of 11,000 lives in the past year alone. Some 9,300 of them were due to a decrease in motor vehicle deaths, attributed in large part to the fact that people did less driving and kept their speed down.

However, despite the improvement, there were still no less than 105,000 accidental deaths in the United States. And, for every person who lost his life, there were more than 100 others who were seriously injured.

The National Safety Council estimates the economic loss involved, counting loss of wages, medical expenses, property damage and the like at $43.3 billion.

Colorado County's share of this loss, applying the average cost per accident to the local area, comes to approximately $4,437,000.

County 4-H Food Show Set April 3

Interested 4-H'ers will focus on typical foods of Early America when the Colorado County 4-H Food Show gets underway April 3 at the American Legion Hall in Columbus. Approximately 50 youth will be competing in the senior and junior divisions.

Food entry exhibits will be on display for the public beginning at 1:00 p.m.

Exhibits are to be in place at 9:30 a.m. with judging beginning at 10:00 a.m.

STAR-SPANGLED HISTORY

HISTORICAL DRAWINGS BY JOSEPH BOGGS BEALE (1841–1926)

"BATTLE OF TRENTON"

When the British opened the way for an invasion of New Jersey, Washington was forced to evacuate his troops across the Delaware River. Winter was coming on, and instead of going after Washington, British General Howe ordered his troops into winter quarters. The British had left a garrison of Hessian troops to guard Trenton. General Washington, running out of time because the enlistment period of many of his soldiers was running, soon ordered an attack on Trenton on December 26, 1776. The attack was successful, and the American army took *more than 1,000 prisoners.
