He knows the best pattern for the people in that home to live by. That formula begins with every person in the home becoming concerned about other people in it. Paul used the expression "Be subject to one another." The word in the original language is the command "submit." It means to yield to what is right, whatever is necessary to the other's needs for help and kindness. This submission is to be mutual. Each mate and family member is to yield to the other's needs.

The yielding is to be done because of reverence and respect for Christ. The concept is that because of a personal submission to Christ and His authority over them, the family members will be able to submit to each other. Submission to Christ and to each other becomes possible for family living. The Book of Ephesians gives a condensed outline of this formula. In the midst of a discussion of the Christ-centered life, the Apostle Paul gave this thoughtful summary:

When Christ controls a person's life, God enables that person to respond properly in all of his personal, business relationships. Moral conduct and concern for other people becomes a natural part of one's life. Since God designed the home,

County Ind. Cattlemen's Assn. To Meet May 13
The Colorado County Society of the Independent Cattlemen's Association of Texas will have a meeting Thursday, May 13 at 8:00 p.m. in the Central Power and Light Company meeting room in Columbus.

This meeting was announced by County Chairman Henry Potter and he urges all members and interested persons to attend.

The purpose of the meeting is to appoint members to serve on the county's four standing committees: Public Relations, Fund Raising, Magazine, and Education and Programs. These committees are the backbone of the day-to-day work of ICA in each county and can take a great load off the county officers and directors' necks if they are properly organized.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Heffer and son Rodney visited Rev. and Mrs. Carl Israel in Paris Sunday.

MRS. W. A. HEFFER DIES
I extend sympathy to the family and relatives of Mrs. Mary (Schmecke) Swain who passed away in a Wharton rest home Sunday.

REFLECTIONS ON International Sunday School Lesson
(Ephesians 5:21-33; 6:1-4)

The Bible provides wisdom for living in all of life's basic relationships. Family living is no exception. Its teachings provide an adequate formula for family living. When Christ controls a person's life, God enables that person to respond properly in all of his personal, business relationships. Moral conduct and concern for other people becomes a natural part of one's life. Since God designed the home,
