COUNTY AGENT'S NOTEBOOK
(By P. Johnnie Cooper, County Extension Agent)

Changes In Seed Certification

Texas producers shopping for certified planting seed for the 1977 season will see a change in the certification label accompanying each bag of seed. Starting next year, seed will be certified for genetic identity only.

Although the new certification label assures that the seed is the variety stated on the label, the big change is the fact that it does not relate to any seed quality factors such as purity, inert matter, other crop seed, weed seed, noxious weed seed and germination. The Texas seed law, however, still requires that this information be truthfully stated on the analysis label accompanying the seed.

The change in seed certification which becomes effective Jan. 1, 1977, means that producers will have to pay particular attention to the labels on the seed bag. The certification label will tell them what variety the seed is, and the analysis label will provide information on quality factors.

Both labels tell the complete story about the seed, but keep in mind that quality factors can vary even though the seed is certified. Certification for genetic identity means that seed has been produced and processed under standards and procedures established by the Texas Seed and Plant Board and enforced by the Texas Department of Agriculture to assure that the variety is as represented by the certification label accompanying the seed.

Reading the label has always been of importance in purchasing seed, but the new standards will place even greater responsibility on the producers to carefully read both labels to determine if the seed meets his quality requirements.

Fed. Screwworm Regs. Now Affect Texas Livestock

All livestock shipped out of Texas must now meet federal inspection and certification requirements, the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced Tuesday, Aug. 3.

These intensified regulations are the result of action by USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) designating the entire state of Texas as an area of recurring screwworm infestations. Prior to this announcement, only the 39 southern counties of the state were so designated.

APHIS officials said the change will mean that all livestock, including cattle, sheep, swine, goats, horses, mules and burros shipped from Texas must be inspected by state or federal animal health officials or accredited veterinarians and be certified free of screwworms before shipment. Animals found to be infested with the parasite will be treated, and the entire shipment of livestock will be sprayed and dipped with a USDA approved insecticide.

In addition, all animals shipped from Texas into southeastern states are required to be dipped or sprayed even if found to be screwworm-free. These special requirements have been initiated in order to prevent the spread of screwworms into the Southeast, an area which has been free of the parasite for over 15 years.

Artist's View of LCRA Coal-Fired Plant

Here, according to the artist, is what the two generating units of the Fayette Power Project, being built near La Grange by the Lower Colorado River Authority and the City of Austin, will look like.

The first coal-burning unit should be completed in 1979, the second in 1981, says the LCRA.

Members of the press and radio were given a tour through the project recently. They found the dirt work nearly completed and were the first to be based the complete length of the 3-mile dam because the final stretch of it had been "topped out" just the previous day.

The earthen dam will hold back the waters of a 2,400-acre cooling pond. Cedar Creek was dammed to form the reservoir.

but likely will never put enough water into it. Water will be pumped four miles from the Colorado River instead, through a 42-inch underground pipeline. Three 1250-HP pumps will force 52,512 gallons of water per minute to the reservoir. It will take 18 months to fill the reservoir this way once pumping begins.

The plant is on 6,597 acres (10 square miles) seven miles east of La Grange just off Hwy. 71 and four miles west of Fayetteville. Room has been provided for four generating units and two reservoirs.

Total cost for the first two units will be about $450 million.

Low-sulfur "western" coal shipped from Montana will be used to fuel Unit 1 of the project, burned at the rate of 350 to 400 tons per hour.
