Mankind — 6 Seconds Old

It is very hard, not to say impossible, to conceive large numbers and quantities like a million or a billion. A billion of years is almost a meaningless quantity. It is totally out of our experience. In order to conceive very large quantities, they must be scaled to a range within our experience.

Take a look into the past through a time scale. Assume a scale in which one day represents one million years.

In that scale, the following would be true: The solar system with planets formed about 13 years ago. Proto life (proteins and like) occurred some 3 years ago, and organic life (cells) 6 years ago. Humankind creatures appeared in the last 20 hours of that period, and homo sapiens in the last 24 hours. All recorded history took only 10 minutes, and the modern science, starting with Newton, developed in a mere half minute. The average life span of modern men is around 6 seconds in the same scale. — The Reporter.

Student Council Has Three Highlights

(By Judy Spates)

On November 22, the Rice High School's Student Council met in the meeting room to have their usual meeting. The meeting was conducted by the president as he proceeded with the roll call. There were three highlights in the meeting. The first was the presentation of the yearbook, the Christmas banquet, and the yearly project.

After the sponsor, Joseph Wendel, complimented the council on its success for the homecoming, the president joined in to say that he appreciated that the members were all at their posts as they should have been.

Secondly, the Christmas banquet was discussed. There were three committees chosen: one to get the tree, one to get a speaker and another to be responsible for the catering.

The last highlight that was discussed was the yearly project and it was suggested by the principal, Fred Graham, to recover some of the seats in the commons. The meeting was then adjourned by the president.

A piece of human skin the size of a quarter and only 1/20th of an inch thick contains a yard of blood vessels, four yards of nerves, up to 1,300 nerve ends, 100 sweat glands, and more than three million cells.
