LCRA, Texas A&M Developing Land and Water Use Plan

An extension of the existing contract between the Lower Colorado River Authority and the Texas A&M Research Foundation will allow time for development of a land and water use plan for the Fayette County Project. The extension was approved early last week by the City of Austin LCRA Project Management Committee and by the LCRA Board of Directors. The City and the Authority are partners in the coal-fired power plant being built in Fayette County.

A generalized land and water use plan will be presented for the 6,600 acre project. The plan will delineate which areas have possibilities for wildlife habitat, livestock grazing, outdoor recreation and other uses. It will also suggest how these areas could be operated and maintained most efficiently.

The existing contract with Texas A&M is for a recreation study of the Authority's 10-county statutory district. Since March, researchers have surveyed over 10 thousand square miles of land, and held public meetings in each county to obtain citizen input.

The recreation needs of Fayette County, and the possible importance of the Fayette Power Project in serving these needs came out of a meeting held in La Grange in June.

Terry Colgan, LCRA Parks Planner, explained the contract extension by saying that the extra time will allow Texas A&M researchers to make detailed studies that will "put the Fayette Power Project into proper perspective within LCRA's land have rallied in 1976 and interest rates may rise moderately higher in 1977's latter half, the income-oriented investor can tie down some good yields in quality bonds, especially at this time. For growth and appreciation portfolios, Babson's currently favors better quality common and convertible stocks in such fields as computers, electronics, insurance, drug and hospital supplies, savings and loans, fuel and energy, trucks, and building supplies.

Money Supplies
Easy money forces on Capitol Hill and in the Carter camp seek even more liberal expansion of money supplies. While the Fed is leery of the inflation danger, we feel that there will be enough money and credit for legitimate business needs. Yet, unlike 1976, stronger demand for funds will mean at least some stiffening in money rates. Look for the prime rate to reach 8 percent by the end of 1977. Long-term rates will tend to firm also, but not to any great degree.

Stock and Bond Outlook
Babson's Reports looks with optimism on stock and bond prospects for 1977. Good stocks are available well below historical peaks, and the odds favor a spate of dividend increases. The basic upturn of the Dow Jones Industrial Average should resume, and new high ground be reached. A reasonable range for the DJIA appears to be 1200 on the high side and 850 on the low side for the year. While bond prices effect over the final three months of 1977. Federal outlays may be lifted further if efforts to stimulate business and reduce unemployment should take a more ambitious tack than now seems likely.

Farm Outlook
American agricultural progress was again displayed in 1976 by the third-best crop year on record. This was surpassed only by 1975's peak and the second-best effort racked up in 1973. Going into 1977, there will be good carryovers of most farm commodities. This would seem to imply planting curtailments and/or changes in the crop mix of plantings in the coming year, but the steadily worsening world food gap suggests government pressure and incentives to sustain all-out effort in food production. This may well take the shape of some plan for a food bank.

No War Expected
The new Administration will have favorable initial rapport with Congress, but how long the honeymoon lasts remains to be seen. Differences in the degrees of liberalism between President-elect Carter and Members of Congress as well as divergences among Congressmen themselves indicate that the platform of the Democratic Party cannot be taken as fait accompli. Initially, efforts will be made to spur consumer spending—possibly through a 55¢ tax rebate—and to create jobs. Since most other objectives will take time, national health insurance, reorganization of the government, and a national energy policy may not materialize in 1977. One good thing, however, is that there should be less political rhetoric poor-mouthing the economy in such a way as to upset consumers and investors.

Unless something unexpected forces international affairs into top spot, domestic matters will hold the spotlight at the White House for a while. Regardless of pre-election comments, foreign policy under Carter may differ little from Ford's approach, except for the Mideast situation and the "fly at any time" tactic of recent years. Though Carter is ostensibly more jealous of U. S. interests in Sino and Soviet-American relations, the spiced deterrent will not be written off. Granted, with the ongoing ferment in the world's trouble spots 1977 will undoubtedly have its share of near-confusions, but Babson's predicts there will be no World War III outbreak in the year ahead.

EDITORIALLY SPEAKING The Gospel According To Bureaucracy

Ever wonder how mankind would have survived in the old days without all these bureaucrats around to help direct their lives? Take Noah, for instance. Picture him, if you can, directing the last few animals aboard the Ark as the storm clouds gather on the horizon.

Suddenly, a man in a button-down suit approaches and wants to know where Noah got the money to build the boat. Noah's answer, "God made me do it" isn't good enough for the man, who's an IRS (Interterritorial Revenue Service) agent. He tells Noah he'd better be down at this office in the morning for an audit.

Next comes the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) man, who tells Noah he must face a class action suit for failing to file an environmental impact statement on the mess the animals will make.

The SPCA (Saints to Prevent Cruelty to Animals) comes next and slaps Noah with a citation for putting all those poor animals in too small a place (regulations call for at least three square cubes for each medium-sized animal).

OSHA (Overseers of Safety from Heaven Administration) inspects the Ark and finds there are no separate rest room facilities for men and female, in addition to determining that the animal ramp isn't up to elephant weight standards. Another citation.

Which prompts Noah to get on his CD and call Heaven, thusly: "Breaker, breaker... you got the Shipbuilder here, lookin' for the Divine Architect. Come on."

Thunder and lightning crash and a voice booms, "Go breaker, you got the Architect."

To which Noah replies, "I got wall-to-wall bears here. Time to pull the hammer down on that big faucet in the sky..." From the Editor's Page of Heavy Duty Trucking Magazine: Doug Condra editor.

Commerce Congregation) leaves the Ark may be crossing some boundaries and threatens a fine if Noah doesn't produce the proper permits.

NITSA (Nature's Holy Trinity and Safety Administration) finds the Ark ill-equipped for travel and issues a fine against Noah, the shipbuilder.

HEW (Department of Heaven/Earth Welfare) finds the living quarters unsuitable and condemns the Ark.

EEOC (Earthly Equality Office of Correcting) says there are "too many white animals on board and not enough black, brown, red and yellow, and that Negroes be made more equal."

To top it off, the local police give Noah a ticket for violating a residential zoning law (parking an ark in your back yard).

Noah appeals to the DOT (Divine Office of Transportation), contending that he needs to complete this project quickly because it's going to rain for forty days and forty nights, and it's already starting to sprinkle.

DOT tells him that's completely out of the question because it will take 180 days to process all the paperwork, then there will have to be public hearings. It will be at least 10 months before the case can be settled.
