

TOM T. WADDELL

Eagle Lake naturalist more than just an expert

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This article by Richard Morehead of the Austin Bureau of the Dallas Morning News sums up beautifully the wonderful contribution made by Tom T. Waddell to this city toward conservation of wildlife, and especially ducks and geese, in this area and we're happy to reprint the story for the information of our readers.)

BY RICHARD MOREHEAD

AUSTIN — Never do I see a wild goose flying or hear its "whonk-whonk" cry in the sky without thinking of Tom Waddell.

Waddell has lived in Eagle Lake most of his 67 years and is the person most responsible for making that rice-growing area near Houston "the goose capital of the world."

We had the pleasure of visiting with Tom again recently and it is an experience one never forgets. It wasn't the harvesting of two geese and two ducks by our party of four men, sitting in blinds in wet plowed ground beneath rainy skies.

What made it special in Tom Waddell, who should rank along with Mark Walton, John Mair, and other great naturalists and conservationists of the age.

Born in Scotland near Glasgow, and a Texan more than 40 years, Waddell helped develop the Llanos Prairie around Eagle Lake into the greatest goose assembly in the world. Rice farming and water are the main attractions to the geese — Canadian speck-bellies (white front), blues and snows.

As a game warden (since retired) Waddell helped see to it that the doveys visitors are protected from slaughter and given safe places to roost and eat.

The geese and ducks are hunted during the season, but the hours and numbers of hunters are strictly limited. The result has been waterfowl for tables all over the country and a good income for the rice farmers who lease their land.

Snow-bellied, blue-eyed Tom Waddell goes to the flat Llanos Prairie almost daily during the fall and winter hunting season, usually accompanied by his Golden Retriever, Rusty. Waddell has another retriever, Roger, who is almost a legend in the waterfowl world. But Roger is too old to hear and see well anymore, and he spent most of the latest season carefully tended in Waddell's back yard.

Since Waddell's wife of many years died a few years ago, Tom has done most of his own housework and cooking. He is a meticulous housekeeper, gourmet cook and warm host.

His life has been an hard-as-Waddell's muscled arms, but he is soft as a dove inside. He gives generously to the geese — an expert strawberry grower and preserve-maker, giving away most of his berries and preserves to friends.

He is also a journalist and scientist. Since 1952, Waddell has kept a daily journal of his activities — the records of when the first teal ducks arrive in the fall, next come the geese and the larger ducks, by tens of thousands and by the time the freeze drive them from Canada and the northern states.

A British couple doing research for "Flight of the Snow Goose" which appeared on television and in book form made two long visits with Waddell. The majestic wild geese mature for life and always return to the same area to nest, then takes the same route south for the winter.

The geese didn't always come to the Eagle Lake country. The movement, started particularly with increased rice farming after World War II. Waddell isn't just a wild goose expert. He knows just as much about deer and other wildlife, and is an authority on the Arwater prairie chicken, an endangered species of the Llanos Prairie which Waddell has helped preserve.

Tom Waddell is an example, the best we know, of an outdoorsman who is also a great conservationist. He has been our friend for many years, and we'd like you to know him too.
