Jane Dostal Named To Who's Who At Blinn

Jane Dostal, a sophomore at Blinn College, has been selected to the Who's Who in American Junior Colleges. She is a 1978 graduate of Rice High School and is attending Blinn on an athletic scholarship.

The Who's Who is a nationally recognized institution of the American academic community. This honor is conferred to second year college students in over 600 colleges in all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

Selections are based on above average academic standing, community service, leadership ability, and future potential. Selections are made by campus nominating committees. A certificate of recognition of this honor will be presented to Jane later this year, and her biography will be included in the 1979-80 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges".

Jane is an architect major and a member of the original Lady Buck basketball team. She is a member of the honor fraternity of Phi Theta Kappa where she holds the office of historian. Jane is also the treasurer of the Newman Club and a member of Blinn College's Circle K. Jane will graduate this May from Blinn with an Associate of Arts Degree.

Jane is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dostal of Eagle Lake.

satellite are expected to give scientists new information about earth's geology.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—One of his fellow Republicans last week warned Gov. Bill Clements to keep a "strong" account of votes in the Legislature before calling his promised special session on writapath, initiative and referendum and any other issues.

Houston State Rep. Chase Undermyer said his recent poll of his conservative district showed overwhelming public apathy on the governor's targeted issues.

Undermyer is the first Republican to publicly caution Clements, who has repeated his promise to call lawmakers back to Austin in either March or September.

Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Bill Clayton have also publicly warned Clements there is no strong backing in the Legislature to spend extra tax dollars with a special session.

Clements has called tax reform, I.R.S. and state aid to cities and counties as the issues that Republican candidates could run and win in 1980.

More Blackened Benches
Texas benches could be more polluted than last summer unless the run-away Intox 1 oil well is capped soon, a federal oceanographer warned last week.

Dr. John Robinson of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said there is a 30 percent chance the oil still flowing into Mexico's Bay of Campeche will wash up in large concentrations on Texas beaches between Brownsville and Port Aransas this spring.

The daily flow is estimated between 2,000 to 50,000 barrels from the well which blew out June 3, 1979.

More Retirements
Two House Committee chairmen announced last week they will not seek reelection, raising to 16 the number of members who are retiring.

Grant D. Marshall and Forrest Green, D-Conservative, both said they were retiring because they had been in office long enough. Grant is chairman of Judiciary Committee and Green heads the Agriculture and Livestock Committee.

Ad to Victims
Starting Jan. 1, the state will provide cash to victims of violent crimes whose injuries caused financial hardship. The new law is imposed by the 66th Legislature and convicted criminals not taxpayers provide the funds.

Beef Import Bill Is Signed Into Law
Congressman Jake Pickle of Austin has praised President Carter for signing the beef import bill into law. The President's signature followed final Senate action this week and House approval in late November. The bill has many features of legislation introduced in early 1979 by Pickle in the House and by Lloyd Bentsen in the Senate. "The 1979 beef import bill is a fair compromise, which received overwhelming support in the House and Senate," said Pickle. "After years of nurturing these needed changes through the legislative and executive branches, we can all have something else to celebrate during the holidays," he added.

The bill implements a counter-cyclical approach, which allows fewer meat imports into the U.S. when domestic supplies are high. More imports will flow into the U.S. when domestic supplies are low. Existing laws allow foreign meat to flood domestic markets when domestic supplies are high and fewer imports when production is low, thus creating boom and bust cycles in the cattle industry.

President Carter vetoed an import bill last year, so this year a compromise was crafted, which got Administration approval.

The President signed the bill quickly, because most import quotas are determined at the start of each calendar year, which will keep prices and supplies from fluctuating so drastically, I am glad this matter has been settled," Pickle concluded.

This new law will help both meat producers and consumers," Pickle said. "The industry will be more stable, which will keep prices and supplies from fluctuating so drastically, I am glad this matter has been settled," Pickle concluded.

Marquart says that the unusually shaped radish was one of several that weighed over five pounds, and despite the size, they are "really good eating," he added.
