

bill. HR 654 continues to gather steam. Forbes magazine is the latest publication to devote space to the concept of reinvesting dividends in original issue stock. The bill, with over 100 co-sponsors, would prevent double taxation of stock dividends and encourage capital formation by reinvesting dividends in stocks. Both companies and individual stockholders would benefit. This concept is attractive for spurring investment and modernization of industry, but the price tag in present form would be prohibitive. The bill could cost some $4 billion at first and up to $50 billion within five years. If we can modify the bill and make it more affordable, I could support it.
