South Texas Project Starts Const. Restarts

The South Texas Project has initiated work on the first phase of a multi-phase restart of construction work which had been stopped on the nuclear plant, Houston Lighting & Power Company announced this week.

The restart program was agreed upon by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission Friday, Oct. 3.

The first phase of work is in structural steel welding and will cover work previously done as well as new construction.

Work on structural welding, as well as in two other areas, was halted voluntarily by HLP, project manager for the plant, and Brown & Root, prime contractor. Problems leading to the work stoppages centered around the adequacy and implementation of established procedures as well as inspection errors discovered by the project's builders.

In the time since these activities were stopped, we have taken positive steps to correct and prevent deficiencies in construction on this job," commented George W. Oprea, Jr., executive vice president for HLP.

In addition to structural welding, HLP is proposing to begin work in the two other areas of work stoppage in the near future. They include pipe welding and concrete pouring in complex configurations.

The largest energy investment ever made in South Texas, the $2.7 billion plant will generate energy for South Texas equal to 25 million barrels of oil a year. The South Texas Project is owned by Houston Lighting and Power, Central Power and Light, City Public Service of San Antonio, and the City of Austin.

Alpha Delta Phi Has Model Meet

Alpha Delta Phi met in the home of Linda Bales on Oct. 6. The meeting opened with a special welcome to "Banquet," cleverly blending the ingredients of Beta Sigma Phi members into a tasty treat. Once this "welcome" was mixed and baked, the regular meeting began with Opening Ritual.

Minutes were read and approved. Janice read a thank you note from Gail for the carterons she received while owned by Houston Lighting and Power, Central Power and Light, City Public Service of San Antonio, and the City of Austin.
