

Chamber discusses closing office; sets date for visit by Santa Claus

Reducing office facilities for the Eagle Lake Chamber of Commerce was discussed Monday by the group's board of directors as a means of reducing expenses.

No formal action was taken, but it will be discussed at the board's meeting next month.

"Members really need to attend that meeting," said Roy Dean Van Nort, president. Although not developed, possibilities would include doing the office in the municipal building, and having chamber literature distributed from the city business office.

The chamber office is busiest during the Fall hunting season and during the Christmas season. Van Nort said. At one time public chamber business was conducted from the offices of The Headlight.

In other business, Van Nort said the chamber netted between $700 to $800 from the recent barbecued chicken sale.

Fireworks injuries mar 4th

Traffic fatality reports over the July 4 weekend generally overshadow another category of accidents—fireworks.

Fourth of July and Christmas holidays are when most of the estimated 6,000 to 7,000 fireworks injuries occur in the United States each year, according to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. About 20 percent of these are eye injuries, caused primarily by firecrackers and bottle rockets.

In Texas last year, fireworks caused 72 reported eye injuries, 48 of which involved bottle rockets, notes Dr. Richard D. Cunningham, an ophthalmologist at Scott and White Clinic in Temple.

"Again this year, a number of Texans will be subjected to potentially blinding injuries from fireworks because of our ignorance or indifference to the hazards posed by these devices," Cunningham writes in the June issue of Texas Medicine, journal of the Texas Medical Association. "Nearly all blinding injuries could be prevented if all participants would use protective eyewear."

Last year, bottle rockets caused nine of the 12 reported cases of fireworks blindness in Texas and 11 instances of partial but permanent vision loss, the physician says.

Although many states through legislation have sharply curbed or banned fireworks except for religious, cultural or public display, Texas has not. Cunningham notes that Class C "common" fireworks remain legal in Texas under federal law. These include firecrackers not more than an inch and a half long, sparklers, fountains, roman candles and bottle rockets. "Local ordinances are not uniform and are often poorly enforced," he explains.

Organizations including the American Academy of Ophthalmology, the American Academy of Pediatrics, the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness and the National Fire Protection Agency have encouraged enactment of strict regulations regarding the use of fireworks.

"These injuries are unnecessary and preventable," Cunningham says.

"As citizens we should urge strengthening of state and local fireworks regulations and encourage better enforcement of enacted laws."
