A big difference

I began attending school at the age of three. Twenty-three years later, one thing can be said with certainty: I like to learn, and my job allows me that privilege.

There are many differences, of which I'm sure the majority are obvious, between a large city like Boston and a small one like Eagle Lake. The differences cut across all boundaries. They cross over natural and manmade barrier, in fact, these are small vs. large-city differences, evident around the world. Evident to me here, in Eagle Lake.

I was in the police station the other day, during one of my rounds, when the radio called for "anyone in the office." Joel Garcia responded.

"Can you get ready some water and ice? Some of our boys are getting thirsty!" If I hadn't heard the fire alarm earlier, or seen the volunteer firefighters drive away in their trucks, I would have smiled. But under the soothing tone of T. J. Smith's voice there was a sense of urgency.

I was allowed to accompany Mr. Smith to the fire, and when we arrived, the blaze was under control. Pete Canaris, Chuck Stephens and Gary Glaiser were lying in the shade of some trees, covered with sweat and smoke, waiting for some water, some oxygen. Everyone was a bit frightened. This was evident in their eyes, their smoke-blackened faces and nervous hands. Chief Sonny Spanihel was running around checking on each of his men. Jim Allen was in the hospital.

You see, it would be difficult to explain to someone in Boston about all this. Firefighters do that every day, they'd say, it's part of their job. The fact is, that what the Eagle Lake Volunteer Fire Department (and any other similar organization) does is not strictly part of their job, it's part of ours. I would have to explain that these men have jobs, that they are losing time and money while giving much of themselves. But the story would not end. I'd have to say more to be understood completely.

T. J. Smith drove me around and explained everything even before I asked. We went to the hospital to see Jim and check on his condition. Chief Spanihel met us there, inquiring with a sense of paternal instinct. The key to all this is that none of these men had to be there. Edward Sunderman, Darrell Gertson, Thurston Webb, all these and others whose names I did not get, were doing something that may only be rewarded with a few expressions of gratitude. Like I said, I learn about people, about their [illegible] and about their [illegible] up someone in [illegible].

[illegible] women have one [illegible] that rings true, [illegible] in our situation," [illegible] Smith. "As soon as [illegible] done with one fire [illegible] go back and get ready for the next one. The next [illegible] could be at your place."

[illegible] hours later, as I was [illegible] home, I saw Edward Sunderman again, out [illegible] of the fire station. They were finishing up and [illegible] day at work. "Long day," I asked, feeling like a fool [illegible] soon as I'd said it. "Just [illegible] long enough...I'm getting home," he said with a smile. I wondered why they [illegible] it, and what it would be like if nobody did.

Plan your business tax

Any business worth building is worth protecting – and conserving – for your benefit and the benefit of your family. Aetna Life and Casualty has published a booklet that helps simplify that task by explaining what to look for when seeking tax, legal and accounting advice.

"Business Tax Planning" features new federal estate and gift tax rates and other information based on the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981.

Subjects discussed in the 15-page booklet are the desirability of incorporation, estate tax freezing techniques, how to shift income to dependents and various business disposition plans.

Calculating estate tax

There have been so many changes in the federal tax laws that if sufficient estate planning isn't done, your heirs could be in for a big – and disappointing – surprise, says Linda Ambrose of Aetna Life and Casualty.

"Estate Tax Planning" is a booklet designed by Aetna that gives a general understanding of the basic rules of taxation for estates valued over $225,000.

The booklet discusses what property is taxed in your estate, at what value and how the tax is calculated. It also provides information about the new marital deduction rule, the three types of wills and the tax effects of each and tax planning techniques.

"Estate Tax Planning" features charts showing the unified estate and gift tax table, simplified tax tables, the effect of 10 percent compounded estate growth and the amount of federal estate taxes levied on estates gross estates between $600,000 and $10 million with the three types of wills.

Confused about which air conditioning unit to buy?
Fortunately, there's an easy way to determine which one will operate most economically: look for the model with an Energy Efficiency Ratio (EER) or Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio (SEER) of 8 or higher.
In addition, you should make certain the system is sized to fit your home and installed correctly—other factors essential to maximum efficiency and electricity savings.
But air conditioners with the same cooling capacity can vary greatly in individual efficiency. By comparing EER/SEER numbers, you can tell which unit will do the job with less electricity.
Although a high efficiency model may cost more initially, it will save you money in the long run through lower operating expenses. That's an important consideration here in South Texas where air conditioning is in use so many months of the year.
Be sure to check EER/SEER numbers before you buy air conditioning. Your best value is a unit with an efficiency rating of 8 or more.

Area farmers are combining maize with some yields of 5000 pounds or better. Also poor yields recorded on some land where excessive water stood. A lot of maize fell due to the dry weather and hot temperatures. Rice harvest is beginning to get underway and corn harvest is about a week or ten days off.

County Agent's Notebook

Summer means lawn problems

Summer means hot weather in Texas along with outdoor sports and long lazy days. It also means lawn problems: drouth, weeds, insects, and diseases.

Lawn problems can cause headaches for homeowners unless the problems are accurately diagnosed and properly treated before they become severe.

Dry spots, thin turf and weeds can result from improper watering, fertilizing and mowing practices. Before applying a chemical to correct lawn problems, be sure that recommended cultural practices are followed.

Drouth stress most often occurs in mid-summer and shows up as wilted, discolored turf. Watering schedules should be adjusted to wet the soil to a depth of four to six inches, and only when the grass shows symptoms of moisture stress. Mowing heights might also be raised one-half inch to improve drouth tolerance in mid-summer.

Lack of nitrogen or iron often creates a lawn problem. Grass with a nitrogen deficiency may have a pale color and be heavily infested with weeds. Abundant seedheads are another symptom of nitrogen deficiency. A light application of a nitrogen fertilizer will improve the lawn's appearance.

Grass leaves that have yellow stripes parallel to the leaf margins may be deficient in iron. An application of iron sulfate or iron chelate at four-to-six week intervals will usually correct this deficiency.

If a St. Augustine lawn has symptoms similar to nitrogen or iron deficiency but does not respond to applications of either material, St. Augustine Decline (S.A.D.) should be suspected. Close examination of turf infected with S.A.D. shows small green and yellow blotches on the leaves. Good maintenance practices should be continued where S.A.D. is a problem.

Leaf spot diseases are generally a problem when lawns are under stress and these regular maintenance practices allow you to keep a check on lawn conditions so that you'll be able to detect a problem early, should one develop.

Summer means hot weather, which increase with high temperatures, drouth, heavy shade and close mowing. Proper mowing and watering will reduce these problems, but fungicides may be required to prevent serious damage.

Chinch bugs and white grubs feed heavily on lawns during mid-summer and their damage resembles drouth injury, notes the specialist. If the turf does not respond to irrigation, inspect the lawn for these insect pests. Both insects damage St. Augustine grass, but only the white grub damages bermudagrass lawns.

Chinch bugs and white grubs can be effectively controlled with applications of insecticides. Water the lawn thoroughly prior to applying the insecticide for chinch bug control. A light watering after the insecticide application also increases its effectiveness. We advise drenching the lawn after the insecticide is applied for grub control since the grubs feed in the soil.

The best way to keep a healthy, attractive lawn, is through proper mowing, watering and fertilization.

Crop disaster aid for West farmers

Governor Bill Clements has announced the federal government will provide disaster relief to West Texas farmers.

That announcement follows the governor's request on July 14 that 26 counties be declared crop disaster areas by U. S. Department of Agriculture. Clements said $350-$400 million dollars will be available to those farmers with weather-destroyed crops.

Recent heavy rains, hail, and tornados have left many Texas farmers in an economic emergency.

Hearings set to allow UPS to transport packages in state

Hearings on the application of [illegible] Parcel Service for authority to transport packages from point to point within Texas are to begin September 21, according to an order issued last week by the Railroad Commission's transportation division.

UPS presentations will be given on the following dates: September 21-24, September 28-October 1, October 26-29, November 2-5, November 9-12, November 30-December 3, December 7-10, and December 14-17. The first two weeks of testimony will be given in Austin by UPS personnel and public witnesses who live in the area. The hearings will then move to Dallas, resuming October 26, where the remaining testimony on behalf of the UPS application will be heard.

Truck and bus companies who oppose the UPS application will present their evidence following UPS.

The Commission's Transportation Division had originally planned to begin the hearings May 11. They were postponed after parties in the case asked to present oral arguments on procedural matters to the Railroad Commissioners. Those arguments were heard May 3.
