Breads of Lent

The Lenten season, which begins six weeks before Easter, features some special breads which had their beginnings in ancient customs. Some early Christians in ancient Rome made a special dough from flour, water and salt, shaped it into a form which symbolized two crossed arms. This was a special reminder that Lent was a time of devotion and penance. They called this special dough "broccale" - "little arms." These broccale later were called pretzels by the Germans and are still used in many places with special emphasis during Lent. Another special bread which had its beginnings in the Lenten season was the Hot Cross Buns. Many feel this treat is probably the outgrowth of ancient pagan customs of sacramental cakes eaten in honor of the Goddess, Eastre. Falling to discourage this practice, early clergy decorated the buns with a cross and gave special blessings to give a religious meaning. Hot Cross Buns are usually only available during the Lent and Easter season. Wouldn't you like to make these special treats for your family? Let me know and I'll send you some recipes.
