Three-zone morning dove season to be considered by state officials

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission will consider establishing a three-zone morning dove alignment for the state when it convenes in Austin on July 28.

If adopted, the three-zone system would replace the two-zone setup which has been in effect since 1946. Ron George, dove program leader for the Parks and Wildlife Department, said the three-zone proposal is designed to provide better hunting opportunities when doves are available and reduce the number of immature doves in the hunter's bag.

Details of the proposal have been published in the Texas Register, and interested persons may direct comment to Ron George, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Tx. 78744, prior to July 28.

Under the proposed system, the state would be divided into a Panhandle Zone, consisting roughly of the Panhandle-South Plains, the Northern Trans-Pecos and portions of north and northwest Texas (see map); a Central Zone covering most of east and central Texas; and a Rio Grande Zone encompassing all the Rio Grande Valley, South Texas and the Southern Trans-Pecos.

If approved, the Panhandle Zone morning dove season would open September 1. The Central Zone would open on the first Saturday in September (Sept. 3 this year), and the Rio Grande Zone would open the first Saturday after September 18 (Sept. 17 this year).

The new system would establish a season of 45 consecutive days with a 15-bird daily bag limit for the Panhandle Zone; a 70-day split season for the Central Zone consisting of 60-day fall season and a 10-day winter season beginning the first Saturday after Jan. 1 (Jan. 7 in 1984) and a 12-bird daily limit; a 70-day split season would be established in the Rio Grande Zone with an aggregate 12-bird daily bag to include no more than two white-winged doves. In an area designated as a Special Four-Day White-winged Dove Area, the four-day white-wing season would be Sept. 3-4 and 10-11, 1983, during which the daily bag limit would be 10 white-winged doves and 12 mourning doves.

Shooting hours in this area during the white-wing season would be noon to sunset; shooting hours for the rest of the seasons and zones would be 30 minutes before sunrise and sunset. In the El Paso portion of the Panhandle Zone there would be no four-day white-wing season as such, but hunters would be permitted to take 15 doves daily, not to include more than two white-wings during the mourning dove season.

As in the past, all persons who hunt white-winged doves would be required to have a White-winged Dove Stamp in their possession in addition to a valid hunting license. George pointed out that persons exempted from having to purchase a hunting license because of their age or any other reason still must possess a white-wing stamp to hunt white-winged doves.

The retention of one fully-feathered wing would be in the Rio Grande Zone and the Special White-winged Dove Area at all times. This requirement simplifies identification of doves and both mourning doves and white-wings occur. This would not be required in either the Central or Panhandle Zones, George said.

George said, "While it is recognized that the three-zone system may not completely resolve all dove regulation problems, department biologists believe this system would provide better hunting for most Texas hunters."
