Mattox saga continues behind closed doors

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS
By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

The hubbub stirred by a grand jury's investigation of Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox's campaign finance practices has died down while the probe continues behind closed doors. Mattox, himself, voluntarily appeared before the grand jury last week clutching an armload of documents he says will convince jurors he correctly reported some questionable campaign loans.

The effect of Mattox's testimony on jurors will remain unknown until the jury decides whether to indict him.

Following his courtroom appearance, Mattox put the final touches on a controversial state-Exon oil lease settlement.

Mattox said South Texas multimillionaire Clinton Manges' firm should get $13 million of $4 million settlement that Exxon will pay the state. The dispute involves a South Texas acreage where the state has contended Exxon has operated for over 50 years without a valid lease. Exxon had fought Manges, who owns the land, Eliminated is the grand jury is probing whether some of Mattox's loans were arranged by Manges, who also contributed several thousand dollars to Mattox. The question is not whether the loans were illegal, but whether Mattox reported them correctly.

New state laws
More than 800 new state laws went into effect last week as passed by the Legislature last spring. Among them are a $200 fine for causing a class and a $1,000 fine and a year in jail for knowingly passing venereal disease.

The Railroad Commission can now impose fines of up to $10,000 a day for oil and gas drilling violations and pollution. The Commission now also charges a special $100 fee for drilling permits which goes into a special fund to plug the many abandoned wells in Texas.

The former 18 percent minimum and 24 percent maximum interest rate on bank credit card purchases was lowered to 14 percent and 22 percent in July.

The transportation of several agricultural commodities is deregulated. Products being transported from farms and ranches to the point of first manufacture are exempt from Railroad Commission regulations.

Direct grain sales
Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower suggested last week that Texas farmers and the Mexican government would both benefit from direct grain sales between one another.

Jun Maldonado, now a Rio Grande Valley school counselor, survived a credentials committee battle to topole long-time activist Richard Moya of Austin, a county commissioner.

The group is now intent on healing inner wounds which might hamper the Galveston shoreline erosion from Hurricane Alicia is up to 100 feet in some places and dozens of houses are now in the water or the middle of the beach, causing legal complications for their owners and the state.

Texas law says the state owns land which is covered by high tide.

Thus, the erosion and newly formed beaches have confused property lines in many areas.

"Secret code"
A Houston legislator, Rep. Paul Colbert, says the state laws and regulations on public education contains terms which must sound like a secret code to the layman.

The former Senate Education committee clerk has compiled a "glossary" of school finance terms which is 10 pages long, typewritten singleness.

BEWARE OF A HOUSE THAT'LL HAUNT YOU.

The haunting starts just after you settle into a home that doesn't have built-in energy savers. Like insulated walls, windows, doors, ducts, water heater and attic—and an efficient heating and air conditioning system. Without them, ghostly heating and cooling bills appear. Every month. Invisible energy leaks begin to lurk. Eerie drafts wander here and there. A terrifying tale—one that goes on and on. Unless, of course, you build or buy a Good Cents Home. The home that's designed with energy-conserving features that cut your heating, cooling and water heating energy usage up to 50%.

Now, Isn't that reason enough to ask your builder or Central Power and Light Company about a Good Cents Home?

A GOOD CENTS HOME WON'T HAUNT YOU MONTH AFTER MONTH.
