Old photographs of Texas building interiors needed for history

Interest in preserving and restoring historic buildings has reached every corner of Texas. However, it is still difficult for people who care about Texas heritage to find photographic documentation on buildings because material is scattered over the state. But now the largest collection of interior photographs of Texas homes and public buildings to date is being compiled. Already more than 200 views have been located and more are being sought both in public and in private photographic collections. Area residents have a chance to use their old photographs to help this effort.

This project, "Images of Victorian Texas: 1880-1920," which has the support of many preservationists throughout the state, aims to locate photographs of the interiors of Texas buildings, especially houses, taken before 1920. These interior views show what kinds of furniture, draperies, carpets and accessories were in use at a point in time in a specific place. They document characteristic room arrangements, seasonal changes, special efforts to accommodate the climate as well as ethnic and regional variations in interior design. A comprehensive survey of photographs of Texas interiors will enrich preservation and restoration efforts.

As many people know, interior photographs are rare when compared with the number of surviving portrait photographs and exterior building views. Some interior photos survive in library and archival collections but many interior views are in individual collections and in family photo albums. Dr. Cynthia Brandimarte, director of the project, is eager to hear from individuals or institutions that have interior photographs taken between 1880 and 1920. She wants to make sure that interiors from all areas of Texas and interiors of all group of people are well-represented in this research. If you have, or know someone who has, such photographs, please write to Dr. Cynthia Brandimarte, Images of Victorian Texas, 1010 Winsted Lane, Austin, Texas 78703 or call (512) 472-1833.

Control scab in Irish potatoes

Fall potato planting time will soon be at hand. Nothing discourages a gardener quicker than to go through the efforts of planting and culling a plot of Irish potatoes only to find them at harvest severely damaged by a potato scab infestation. Potato scab leaves deeply indented lesions on the surface of the potato, thereby increasing the amount of potato required to peel off during preparation for cooking and also increases loss of potatoes in storage due to increased incidence of rot. Potato scab disease has been on a major increase in Colorado County. Following are some practices that will go a long way toward solving your potato scab problem.

1. Plant potatoes on a four year rotation.
2. Avoid alkaline producing soil amendments such as lime, manure, or ash.
3. Apply to open seed row prior to planting 100 pounds dusting sulfur per 100 foot of row. Do not place potatoes in contact with sulfur. Plant clean seed each spring.

LCRA helps buy 15 acres for Travis county Wild Basin park

The Lower Colorado River Authority will help Travis county buy 15 acres to complete the Wild Basin Wilderness Park in southwest Travis county. LCRA directors voted September 8 to commit up to $250,000 toward the purchase of the acreage. The money will come from the sale of three tracts of LCRA land near Lake Travis determined to be unsuitable for parks development.

The directors also approved the sale of those three tracts at its Thursday meeting. "This action is in keeping with LCRA's mandate as spelled out in its Enabling Act to maintain parks and natural-science laboratories," said John Scanlon, one of two LCRA directors representing Travis county. Scanlon noted the sale of LCRA lands to pay for the acreage means the transaction will not affect LCRA's electric or water rates. "The tracts we sold had no value as park land," he said. "Two of the tracts had no access to the lake, and the third tract was simply inaccessible. I am pleased that LCRA is reinvesting the proceeds from the sale of these lands for projects that can be used immediately for public benefit."

Bill Archer, the other Travis county LCRA director, also voiced his approval. "I'm pleased that our board of directors has agreed to invest money generated from our land sales in Travis county parks," Archer said. Travis county has agreed to sue for condemnation of the acreage, known as the Brander Tract, on behalf of Wild Basin Wilderness Park.

The 200-acre park is a natural area containing flora and fauna of the Texas Hill Country, including rare species of grass, flowers and birds. The park is used for outdoor programs for more than 5,000 area school children each year, and it conducts research programs, seminars and tours for teachers and the general public.

Park President Janet Poage said that, after the LCRA/Travis county purchase, only 5 acres will remain to be acquired to complete the park. In addition to LCRA and Travis county money, Poage said local residents contributed cash and land worth $615,000, which was matched by federal funds, to acquire the Wild Basin land.

Travis county commissioners John Milloy and Bob Honts indicated they are confident the county will be able to provide its share of the money to purchase the acreage.

The sale of the LCRA tracts will also complete LCRA's purchase of the 31-acre Westcave Preserve, which the board approved last May. LCRA will lease the land, also located in southwest Travis county, back to Westcave Preserve, Inc. for day-to-day maintenance and operation.
