Opinion

May be on teacher salaries

White says he will call session

Governor Mark White said last week that despite House Speaker Gib Lewis' predictions to the contrary, he intends to call a special legislative session in late '83 or early '84, presumably to raise teacher salaries.

The Speaker early last week had suggested White would wait until May or June before calling lawmakers back to Austin.

Either way, the Governor's signals to state legislators running for office this spring are very clear: he intends to make raising teacher salaries a campaign issue this spring.

His timing is just the sort of timing that legislators do not like. It's bad enough that the Governor would hold their feet to the fire on this issue, but the deed will have to be done shortly before an election.

The problem for lawmakers who resisted the Governor's wishes last session is that a tax hike probably will be necessary to pay for the salary increases.

Now, if the Governor sticks to his schedule, they will have to come to Austin and take a stand on the issue, then go back on the primary campaign trail and justify that stand to the voters.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

Needless to say, many incumbents aren't thrilled about the hard political row ahead, and House Speaker Lewis, who opposed the tax hike last session, has predicted that White may delay the special call until after the primary elections.

Lewis reasons that the five extra months might give the Texas economy time to recover enough to allow the pay raise without the tax hike. Lewis also pointed out that a key task force studying the education issues is not expected to report its findings to the Governor until then.

But most important, he said, teacher contracts already are signed and won't be renegotiated until next August, so there's no need to rush.

Even if the Governor did delay the special call until after the primary elections, lawmakers may not feel that much better off for it.

With the special session lurking only a few days after the primary, every candidate still will have to take a stand on the issue. No candidate will be able to credibly dodge the issue of whether he or she will vote for a tax hike.

Those incumbents who manage to win the primary will have to follow through on their promises in the special session, then go back home and campaign some more...this time to justify that vote in a general election.

Three-For-Three
The U. S. Justice Department made it three-for-three last week by approving the Texas Congressional redistricting plan.

Earlier this summer the feds approved redistricting plans for the Texas House and Senate which were passed by the legislature.

While federal approval was a major hurdle, all three plans still face court challenges from a coalition of GOP and minority leaders.

Both groups are opposed to the way districts are drawn in Dallas, diluting both Republican and black precincts to the advantage of white, liberal Democrat incumbents. They plan to press suit.

Radioactive waste
The general manager of the Texas Low-level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority said his group has picked two sites in Texas from which to select a waste burial facility.

The two sites apparently are in Hudspeth County in West Texas and Dimmit County in South Central Texas.

The waste authority has no power of eminent domain and must buy the land from willing sellers. The agency plans to decide on one site in early January.

This fact contradicts current folklore which classifies both major parties as highly urbanized.

Rural voters
The dean of Austin's political forecasters, George Christian, says that rural voters still are making themselves influential in Texas races, despite appearances to the contrary.

The former secretary to LBJ points out that last year the top seven counties only contributed 30 percent to the total Texas vote, down from 40 percent in 1972.

This fact contradicts current folklore which classifies both major parties as highly urbanized.

Conservation plan
A precedent-setting land management agreement was reached last week when Land Commissioners Garry Mauro agreed to lease over 9,000 acres in Briscoe County with designated conservation improvements as part of the deal. The deal includes development of wildlife and game, and such improvements as windmills, fences and water resources.

Soil district gets funds
Texas would have to take steps to provide a more stable method of protecting its agricultural lands so that they remain productive and viable. From our vantage point, we are seeing Texas change rapidly due to mushrooming population and economic growth. As a result, the state's land resources are being utilized more intensively than ever before," he added.

Conservation Districts in need of additional technical personnel are expected to begin hiring qualified persons after September 1, in getting conservation practices applied to the land in a voluntary program we need technical assistance available to landowners to assist them in using their own resources for implementing an individual conservation plan," said Melvin Albright, chairman, Colorado SWCD number 333.

"Simply put, this means that we encourage landowners or operators within our district to take advantage of technical assistance in site selection, engineering and the design of measures or management systems which would solve a conservation problem on a farm or ranch," added Albright.

Albright went on to say that during this fiscal year conservation plans were prepared for 45 district operators who operate 5560 acres of land.

"This represents over 223,480 acres or 41 percent

Poster, essay contests plans announced

An election for a director of Zone V on the Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District board is scheduled for October 4 at the Bernardo Fire Station announced Melvin Albright, chairman of the board. The election will be held at 6 p.m.

A state law decrees that to be eligible to vote in a soil and water conservation director's election, a person must own agricultural land within the subdivision where the election is being held. The person must also live in a county all or any part of which is in the district and the voter must be 18 years old.

Legal qualifications state that a candidate for the office of a soil and water conservation district director must own land in the zone he represents, be 18 years old and be actively engaged in farming or ranching, life or he must also live in a county all or part of which is in the district.

Current directors of the board of the Colorado

SWCD are Melvin Albright, Herbert Engstrom, Theo. Schultz, Henry Sunderman and Royal Henneke.

Poster, essay contests
Plans for the Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District's annual poster and essay contests have been announced by Theo. Schultz, chairman of the contest committee.

The essay contest is open to all students 15 years of age and younger attending schools in Colorado County. The poster contest is open to all students in Colorado County 12 years of age and younger.

Deadline for entering either contest is January 18, 1984. Entries may be sent to: Colorado SWCD, 316 Spring Street, Columbus, Texas 78834, or they may be delivered to the SWCD office in Columbus.

Topic for the essay contest is "Soil and Water Conservation", and the essay must not exceed 300 words. It is preferred, but not required, that the essay be typed. A cover sheet should be used, bearing the student's name, address, school name, school grade, and Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District No. 333. The student's name should not appear on the essay.

Topic for the poster contest is "Resource Conservation" and the work is to be on a standard poster board cut in half size, (approximately 22" x 14").

Top winners in both contests will be honored along with their parents and their teacher at the Columbus Lions Clubs annual awards banquet in the spring, receive an award through the district from Central Power and Light Co., and will be sent to Temple for regional competition.

Tina Kollman of Columbus was the top regional winner in the poster contest last year.

Teachers and/or students who need more information should call 732-2773, or come by the office at the county agricultural building in Columbus.
