New direction for school funds

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS
By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

When it comes to redirecting government policy, tight money might be the the real mother of invention. When government's coffers get low, some creative officeholders look for new ways to raise revenues, while others simply fall back on tax increases.

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro last week briefly pointed out a new direction his office will take to raise money for Texas schoolchildren from management of public lands.

Mauro wants to trade non-productive state land for land he can rent at commercial rates, a new tact he says could bring in extra millions to the Permanent School Fund.

Interest money from the Permanent School Fund is divided and given to Texas public school districts by the Legislature. Traditionally, the fund is replenished by proceeds from oil and gas leases on state lands which Mauro manages. State lands without oil and gas are leased for other purposes such as grazing, hunting, etc.

Mauro's intent is to swap the low-revenue lands for commercial tracts which can be leased at 10 percent of purchase price or more. Although the concept is not new, Mauro is pursuing it with emphasis. Should he be able to put it together, the school fund could grow by several hundred million.

Encroachment settlement

Mauro told reporters last week he will use $2.5 million obtained from a recent coastal encroachment settlement to purchase three to four commercial tracts in the near future. He did not identify the tracts.

The settlement was reached with a Texas City firm that had unintentionally, but illegally, used 106 acres of state land for over 70 years. It is the largest encroachment settlement in Texas history, but Mauro says his office is looking at more than 50 other coastal sites where encroachment may have occurred.

Mauro will reinvest money from any future settlements in more commercial real estate, according to Jack Boettcher, Director of Encroachments.

White, Reagan

Texas Governor Mark White visited the president at the White House while attending the National Governors Conference last week.

A few hours later, White spoke to the National Press Club and blasted Reagan on a number of issues ranging from the federal deficit to the economic plight of the Rio Grande Valley. It was the latest in a long stream of public criticisms of the president by the governor who has promised to campaign and unseat him.

In Washinton, White also visited with Texas congressmen and other dignitaries. White is mentioned in Democratic Party circles as a vice presidential possibility.

Speaker's water plan

Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis last week pulled the drapes off his comprehensive state water plan which he will push in the next legislative session.

Included is a proposed constitutional amendment to provide $600 million in bonds to develop water resources and improve water quality over the next 10 years. The dollar figure is twice the amount passed last year by the Senate but rejected in the House.

Lewis' plan would allow local water suppliers to adopt water conservation regulations as necessary.

Special session

The speaker's proposed water plan and the governor's proposed tax hike to raise teacher salaries may be found loosely tied together in a special session later this year. The speaker's forces killed the tax bill last session, but Lewis has indicated he could support a self-destructing tax for education while the Texas economy recuperates.

The governor needs the speaker's support and the votes of the West Texas delegation to keep his campaign promise of, raising teacher salaries.

The two issues could be headed for a mutual trade off. Meanwhile, rumors of a special session have sparked several groups and agencies to prepare to ask Gov. White to include their concerns in the special session.

MAD convention

Texas Mexican-American Democrats held their endorsement convention in San Antonio last week and, when the smoke cleared, failed to underlibe any candidate for U.S. Senate.

A two-thirds victory is needed for a MAD endorsement. Bob Krueger and Lloyd Doggett, campaigned hard. A third candidate, Kent Hance, acknowledged he had little endorsement support but told the convention he wanted their November votes, should he get the nomination.

Krueger got the endorsement committee's nod, but failed by a couple of percentage points to get the two-thirds necessary.

Will rail change be good or bad?

Will the abandonment of the rail line running through Eagle Lake to Sealy have a negative impact on the city and its future?

According to some here it shouldn't, because of service availability on the other lines.

And, the elimination of many of the rail-street crossings should improve traffic.

About a month ago, a consulting firm for the merging of Southern Pacific with Santa Fe, Reimer and Associates of California, sent a letter to Eagle Lake city officials asking for their comment on the effect of discontinued rail service on that line.

Robert Klockman, city manager, said a reply to the consulting firm expressed concern about the lack of service to the industrial park property. The rail merger is pending a decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission. If the rail line is declared abandoned, a decision would have to be made in regard to the ownership of surrounding railroad-property, Klockman said.

On the negative side, Klockman said that when a line is abandoned, no one inspects the tracks, and the city could very well suffer from drainage problems.

R.L. Gentry, Eagle Lake railroad master, believes that discontinued service or abandonment would upgrade the city. "We would get rid of about 14 railroad crossings," Gentry said. He added that plans are being made to upgrade the Bellaire line by relaying the rail sometime in September or October. The Sap line that runs through Eagle Lake also will be upgraded, he said.

The industrial foundation is purchasing a 50-acre site in the northwest quadrant of Prairie St., and FM 3013. The rail service to the site, which now may be lost, was thought to be one of the selling points companies would look favorably on in considering a move to Eagle Lake.

Help break the cycle

The Colorado County area Parent Aide Program is looking for volunteers who want to help families overcome child abuse and neglect. Parents aides are caring individuals who work with one family at a time. These families have had few resources for developing responsible parenting skills and oftentimes are economically disadvantaged. More importantly, though, they have asked for help.

The Parent Aide Program is sponsored by the University of Houston's Parent Education Project and has been helping families in Colorado County for two years. Professional training and supervision are given to volunteers.

For more information about the training group scheduled to begin in late March, please call Jean Boehme or Lucretia Batts at (718) 749-7192.

Chili supper at Heritage House to support leukemia society

Paul Love, administrator and Mae Price, SAD of Heritage House, are authorized volunteers for the Leukemia Society who are donating their time and effort to coordinate a special event to raise the needed dollars to help fight leukemia.

The planned event will be a chili supper to be held at the Heritage House March 15 at 7 p.m. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children and may be purchased at office of bookkeeper or social activity director at the Heritage House.

All proceeds from this event will be used to support the Leukemia Society's program of research, patient aid and education.

Leukemia kills more children than any other disease and kills eight times as many adults as children. Leukemia research is looked upon as "the window to the cure of all cancer." The Leukemia Society receives no funds from the federal government or any other agency, but depends totally on contributions from individuals, businesses and special events such as this one sponsored by ARA Living Centers.

"We are extremely proud of the efforts from the senior citizens, management and staff of the ARA Living Centers throughout the state, and hope you will elect to join with them by supporting their special event," noted Love and Price.

Is this someone you know?

Sara was a nurse during World War I. Her favorite story is about the wounded soldier she nursed back to health, the one who later became her husband.

Now she's 92 and confused. Yesterday, Sara forgot to turn off the gas stove. If her daughter hadn't come over, the house might have caught fire.

Sara talks about her husband as if he were still alive. Her children are worried that she'll forget to take her blood pressure medicine, or hurt herself accidentally.

We've known many Saras over the years. We understand the confusion that comes with age, and realize that the confusion often is not necessary. We've created a special living environment for important people like Sara, who need:

- reality orientation,
- security,
- nutritious meals,
- companionship
- and someone to rely on in emergencies.

There is truly no place like home, but we offer the things that make life worth living. If there is a Sara in your life, call us today for more information.
