Opinion

Lewis spreads ripples around Capitol

When the news broke last week that Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis had written state agencies to prepare for "no-growth," the ripples spread fast and wide around the Capitol complex. It quickly increases the stakes and the number of players in the state government budget game.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

Land office A federal agency last week gave the go-ahead to the Texas General Land Office request to sell natural gas from state lands at current market value as payment-in-kind.

White blamed The chairman of the Texas Republican Party, George Strake, didn't miss his cue to blame the governor and Democratic-dominated Legislature for the money problems.

Party split? The budget letter under-scored the odds stacked on the governor's promised special session in coming months to discuss a $2.5 billion education reform package.
