$2.5 billion proposed for teacher pay

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS
By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

The leader of the House Committee on Public Education has proposed a plan to spend $2.5 billion over the next three years to boost teacher pay.

State Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, himself a former teacher, suggests spending $600 million the first year to raise salaries, emphasizing more money for teachers and less for kindergarten and small classes.

Haley's plan would cost about $150 million more than the plan proposed by the Select Committee on Public Education last week.

It was, more or less, a weather balloon released to test the mood of legislators as they anticipate convening in May or June to decide whether to raise taxes for the pay raises.

The impetus behind this special session, Gov. Mark White, indicated he expects to announce his plan for taxes and teachers in the next few weeks.

The governor appears to be taking a more cautious stance than during the last regular session, when he personally lobbied legislators to adopt his plan.

Haley's plan, which comes from a well-respected lawmaker, is concerned mainly with teacher pay.

Radical proposal

It does not address a radical new idea which has become a sticking point with the chairman of the select committee.

The panel chair, H. Ross Perot, is intent on abolishing the elected body of the State Board of Education and replacing it with three apointees of the governor.

Haley's committee will begin meeting next week to hammer out the preliminary salary legislation. Once the House indicates how much tax money it might be willing to approve, White will probably release his bill describing how to raise the money.

Sales, fuel taxes

Meanwhile, an aide to White told reporters last week that White anticipates raising the sales tax by a penny and raising the state gasoline tax by a nickel.

White will also seek an increase in state luxury taxes, he said.

White's proposal to raise the sales tax was opposed last week by the powerful chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee which guards the gate.

Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, said simply raising the sales tax was "taking the easy way out." He favors, instead, removing sales tax exemptions from certain professions as a means of raising revenue from that tax.

Administrater fired

The administrator of the Texas Employment Commission was fired last week from his $52,000-a-year job following a power struggle over the sale of three commission buildings near the Capitol.

Two commissioners complained that administrator Ernie Tullis had not adequately consulted with them in offering the buildings for sale or lease. Tullis then slapped a lawsuit on the Commission, accusing them of violating the State Open Meetings Act, of improper hiring of personnel for personal staffs, and with interfering with his duties.

The board went to Attorney General Jim Mattox for a ruling on Tullis' status, and upon learning from Mattox that Tullis 'served at the pleasure of the board, called a meeting and fired him.

Textbook evolution

Mattox also recently issued an opinion declaring unconstitutional the state regulation requiring that biology textbooks treat evolution as only one of several theories of human origin.

Mattox struck down the rule saying its purpose was government promotion of religion for requiring an equal emphasis on the Biblical view.

Facing the threat of a lawsuit, the State Board of Education voted to repeal the regulation.

Federal takeover

The federal Interstate Commerce Commission said last week it would take over regulation of intrastate railroads in Texas from the Texas Railroad Commission.

The feds accused the Texas panel of "staunchly refusing to comply with federal law in numerous ICC rulemaking and adjudicatory decisions.

The Texas Railroad Commission is presently challenging several ICC actions in court, and is expected to oppose the latest ICC move in court as well.

Youthful problem

Youth often are faced with perplexing problems. With the opening of Lone Star Pizza and Sandwich Shop, they ride their bicycles downtown, and find no place to park them. The sidewalk is handy, but the sign at left says no bicycles allowed on sidewalks. Hopefully, they'll use the rack on the municipal square.

Munson & Kitzman endorsed by law enforcement assn.

On April 16, the Colorado County Law Enforcement Association voted to endorse District Attorney Houston Munson for re-election and Judge Oliver Kitzman for the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 1, according to Jim Broussard, association president.

The association will refrain from being involved in local county politics, however, the majority vote of members will endorse office seekers on a district or state level as long as the office is directly associated with law enforcement.

Technicalities plague our court system and are extremely frustrating to people in law enforcement, the announcement said. This can cause reversal of convictions, a delay in justice, and is extremely costly to the taxpayer, Broussard said.

Munson and Kitzman have both pledged to represent the law-abiding citizens of Colorado County and the State of Texas to eliminate technicalities and use a common sense approach to legal matters.

The association said it does not wish to cast any reflection against any other candidate, but it made the endorsements because members felt the past performance and future expectations from these two officials warranted the backing of the association, he said.

Many help find youth near Weimar

At 5:39 a.m. April 25, the Sheriff's office was advised of a vehicle burglary at the Sprint yard on 90 east of Columbus. Investigation revealed that entry to the vehicle was gained through a wing window on the left side of the vehicle and reaching inside and unlocking the door. The vehicle owner, Michael Wayne Jones, of Ellinger reported a radar detector, a Cobra CB radio, and an Echo repeater were missing.

At 1 p.m. April 27, the office was advised of a lost 3½-year-old child. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Keenon, who reside off County Road 204 north east of Weimar, had wandered out in a wooded area next to the residence and the family was unable to locate him.

Additional assistance was requested by Sheriff Broussard and in a short period people from the Weimar area, the Sheriff's Possee from Freisburg, Columbus, Rock Island and Sheridan, along with employees from various businesses in Weimar, and the Weimar and Columbus fire departments were at the scene to assist. A DPS helicopter from Houston also was called to assist in the search.

Also helping out were JP's from Freisburg, Weimar, and Oakland, and officers from the Sheriff's Departments, City of Weimar, and State Officers. About 150 people came from over the entire county to assist. The area was so heavily wooded that the only possible way to find the child was to walk into the woods.

At approximately 5 p.m., the child was located, unharmed, about one mile east of his home. The Sheriff and all law enforcement personnel would like to express their appreciation for the assistance of everyone. It is gratifying to know that in time of need we can receive the kind of response we received in this incident.

Ants cling together to prevent being lost during flood

To prevent getting separated during a flood, some ants on the North American prairie cling together, forming a big ball, says National Wildlife's Ranger Rick magazine. The ball becomes a floating raft that constantly tumbles, giving each ant a turn to breathe. Amazingly, few ants drown.
