Who's Zat?

BY RACHELLE HUNT
"Put 'em up and hand over the cash," said this little cowpoke. Well, if the Reader Review would have offered a reward to identify this little gasser there would have been a great response. Very few Rice students were fooled by this little sharp shooter. He was, however, accused of being "Billy the Kid" (as in Cook) by Patty Stephens and Sofia Ugarte. Shari Webb mistook this sly expression as belonging to Charles Gaskin. Among the faculty Johnnie Darnell was assumed to be this little culprit, as guessed by Mrs. Kasper and Mr. Hajovsky. Surprisingly, Mr. Grahmann could not come up with the correct identification either. "That student who went correctly included Darlene Stancik, Jan Zbrancik, Michael Sibley, Donna Prazak, Carol Koresko, Vivian Cumpson, Dean Van Nort and Roger Rutledge. This little rascal from the 'west' (Matthews, Texas) is Ronny Little, Ronny is a member of the senior class and active in FFA.

Get energy savings you can measure

The most satisfying way to measure that saving, of course, is in dollars — money you WON'T be spending on energy bills after you move into a Good-Cents home. Utility costs will be significantly less than for a conventional house. That's because you'll need only half as much energy for heating, air conditioning and water heating — the three biggest energy users in most homes. Developed after years of research, Good-Cents sets the standard for energy efficiency in today's housing market. Built-in energy savers may include added insulation, quality windows and doors, good attic ventilation, measures to prevent air leaks, and highly efficient heating, cooling and hot water systems. And even before you buy or build, you'll have a reliable forecast of energy expenditures for your Good-Cents home. A computer analysis will tell you how much it will cost to heat and cool the house and how much energy you will save the first year. Ask your builder or realtor, or get more information at your CPL office.
