Indigent maternity health care topic at commissioners' meeting

A cooperative agreement was approved Monday by Colorado County Commissioners Court, as sought by the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston, that means John Sealy Hospital there will treat Colorado County women who are indigent and are "high risk" maternity cases if the hospital there is funded through a new state law.

Cases not judged by the hospital as "high risk" maternity cases can be seen by the county health nurse in Columbus, and county doctors who volunteer their time to work in that office to see indigent patients.

As the public is becoming aware, the recent legislature adopted a "Women and Infant Health Care Improvement Act" that requires counties to provide payment for indigent health cases that won't be seen by the state supported hospitals. Counties are required to use up to 10 percent of their budget for this coverage, but that doesn't start until Sept. 1 of this year. In the meantime, indigent patients are being charged $800, county judge Lester Cranek said Monday, for the doctor and hospital expenses. And, if the patient can't pay, the doctor and hospital are simply out of luck.

The cooperative agreement approved Monday allows the medical branch to apply for some funds made available by the health improvement act. John Sealy Hospital will provide care only for the high risk patients, Cranek emphasized, and then will only provide outpatient consulting and special diagnostic services, in-hospital delivery care, neo-natal care for new borns from high risk cases, and intensive neo-natal care if the new born needs it.

From 1982 through 1985, 125 women from Colorado County gave birth at the Galveston hospital. Under the term indigent, the family must be at or below 25 percent of poverty level and the mother in the high risk category to qualify for treatment there. Twenty-five percent of the poverty level means the family must not have an income of more than $2,500 annually.

About Town...

•The person whose home was burglarized last week was misidentified to the Headlight. Christine Hruzek's home was burglarized, not Catherine Hruzek, as told to the newspaper. The story does have a happy ending, however. Everything taken from the home has been recovered, and returned to the family.

•Jack Agness, retired sports writer for the Houston Post who now lives in the Rock Island area, was in Johnny's Barbershop the other day for a trim. Mrs. Agnes made a stop next door at the movie club, to chat with Mary Canaris. Visit more often, Jack, we'd even let you type a line or two at the newspaper.

•The rumor going around the country, and Eagle Lake too, that the company that makes Singer Sewing machines is going out of business, simply is not true, according to across the street neighbor Dorothy Kohleffel at the Eagle Lake Sewing Center. She has sold Singer machines here off and on for the past 28 years, and was recently informed by the company that an independent company has been formed to manufacture and sell the machines, including new electronic models. If you are interested, ask her...Singer will be around for some time to come.

•An old idea to produce new business seems to be working at the D&L Fuel Stop across from the Sportsman's Restaurant. After advertising in last week's Headlight for an "Attractive young lady," two women were working at the station Monday morning helping truckers fuel their gravel trucks. The report from the watchers at the Sportman's is that business was booming.

The price of oil has dropped dramatically, bringing local gasoline to under $1 a gallon. According to a report from the Railroad Commission, the 52 refineries in the state processed 126.8 million barrels of oil and hydrocarbon blends last November, compared to 131.8 million barrels in October, and 129.89 barrels in November a year ago. Last year, state offshore leases produced 1.779 million barrels, while in 1984, there were 1.753 million barrels. Natural gas production from those wells was off in 1985. That year there were 194.6 million Mcf produced and in 1984 there were 108.7 million Mcf produced offshore.

•Mary Theuman, Della Grasshoff, Evelyn Beseda and Dorothy Kohleffel made the Lenton Retreat at the Holy Name Retreat House in Houston on Thursday. They were met at the house by Betty Roesner of Katy, sister of Mary Theuman.

•Spring must be here. AstroWorld opens for the season on March 22. It will be open daily until March 30, then on weekends April 5 to June 1, Memorial Day, and daily, except Monday's starting June 3 to August 31.

•The Knights of Columbus, Eagle Lake Council 4843, wish to thank those people who helped patronize their Fried Chicken Dinner which was held Sunday, March 9. The KC's said they hope you enjoyed the meal and will help them again when they host other activities, like this Saturday's St. Patrick's Day benefit dance at the Community Center, and Sunday's Turkey Shoot.

Commissioners handle other routine business

In other business Monday, Colorado County commissioners approved the purchase of a new copy machine for the Sheriff's Department, gave an audience Joe Ols who was asking that a county road be named, and worked on a number of other items:

•Included was approval of a new section to Mentzwood, a development put together by Bobby Hammonds. The Section II platt outlines 17 lots, and leaves right-of-way for a county road should there ever be a need for one. Section 1 of Mentzwood includes 35 lots.

•Mr. Ols was told that commissioners are free to make their own decisions about naming county roads, and some use names while others use numbers. Ols wanted county road 106C changed to Longhorn Lane, but commissioner Otto Loessin decided to stay with the numbers.

•Sheriff Broussard told commissioners that a copy machine purchased used three years ago for $700 was broken and would cost $400 to $500 to fix. He received permission to purchase a new machine for $1,100 from Butler Office Supply in Columbus.

•Commissioners also authorized advertising of a notice that the county intends to post "No Parking, Tow Away Zone" signs on Garden Oak Lane behind the KC Hall west of Columbus. The no parking will be effective on Friday and Saturday nights only, from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. Residents there are trying to control parking in their neighborhoods while dances are held at the Knights of Columbus Hall, commissioner Loessin said.

•A order adopted by the court last month was amended Monday. It requires oil companies to post bond with the county before drilling new wells. The bond is to provide protection to the county in case heavy machinery damages county roads. However, under the formula set up last month, $15,000 bond per mile of paved roads and $2,500 bond per mile for gravel roads, judge Cranek said one company told him it would cost them $1,600 for a $219,000 bond. The amendment, similar to other counties, simply requires a $50,000 bond. Commissioner Bill Stiles suggested the amendment also state that if a driller is only using a very short portion of a county road, the court will consider a written request to lower the bond.

Civic Garden Club names park after the Harrisons

The Civic Garden Club met on March 3. Jeanette Canaris presented an interesting program on the feeding and caring of different shrubs and trees in yards. She also talked about fertilizing lawns and types of chemicals that should be used for different insects and diseases.

The club has decided to name the area in front of the Dairy Queen the Harrison Park. A few ideas the club has in mind for this year are lighting the oak trees around the square with white twinkle lights during the Christmas season. Also suggested were putting planter boxes around businesses on the square.

The slate of officers elected for the 1986-87 year are: president, Robin Thomas; first vice president, Michele Isenhower; second vice president, Vicki Powers; secretary-treasurer, Debbie Powers. The standing committee will be: reporter, Sandy Thomson; scheduling, Beth Waddell; landscaping, Darlene Laughlin; social, Carey Shuart; special projects, Becky Anderson, and telephone, Carol Hollub.

Club dues have been changed to $25 for all members. If you haven't paid your dues or would like to join the Civic Garden Club, you can contact Michele Isenhower or Debbie Powers.

Weimar roadwork starts soon

The construction of a new frontage road along the north side of Interstate 10 in Weimar is scheduled to begin this month, according to a news release from Bruce Bayless of the state department of highways and transportation. Bayless is supervising resident engineer for Colorado and Austin counties.

While the state is overseeing construction, the cost of the project is being funded entirely by the city of Weimar. The new two-lane road, between FM 155 and College Street, will feed the hospital being built in Weimar.

BRH-Garver, Inc., of Houston was the low bidder for the work at $184,131.94. The contract calls for the one-half mile road to be completed in 75 days.

Alzheimer's disease support group meeting to be held in Columbus

On Thursday, March 27 at 6:30 p.m., there will be a meeting at the Stafford Opera House (ground floor meeting room) to discuss orgnztization of an area chapter or support group of Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association. The program will include a videotape entitled "Caring," followed by a brief presentation by Dr. Tom Hancher. Volunteers from the Houston chapter of ADRDA also will assist in this first meeting.

Alzheimer's disease is a progressive disease of the brain that affects many people and has no known cause or cure. Related disorders include other diseases that lead to deterioration of brain function. Support groups and chapters of ADRDA help families cope with the emotional, physical and social stresses involved in the care of these victims.

The meeting is open to those interested in learning about the disease and how support groups help.

County Agent's Notebook

Farmers should heed soil temperatures since early bird doesn't always get worm; Rose tips

While the rose is an amazingly versatile plant that thrives on a wide variety of conditions, gardeners can take certain steps to keep plants healthy and blooming. For a bountiful rose garden this spring, I offer these suggestions:

Rose plants are sturdier and produce more flowers in full sun — at least five or six hours of direct sun is best. Early morning sun is especially good since it quickly dries moisture on plants, thus reducing diseases.

Good drainage and air circulation are essential for preventing diseases and rotting plants.

Some old roses are drought resistant and can exist on rainfall in much of Texas, but most modern roses need watering to develop more attractive plants and blooms. Avoid watering foiliage to prevent diseases. Deep watering at weekly intervals is far superior to frequent light sprinkling.

Traditional heavy pruning may be appropriate for Hybrid Tea roses, but most old roses require less severe methods. Remove weak or dead canes anytime during the year and do general thinning in February or early March. Prune climbers and one-time bloomers only after they flower in the spring.

Improper cutting of blooms can injure roses. It is best to cut few, if any, flowers during the first blooming season. Late afternoon is the best time to cut roses.

Check soil temperature before planting

In many cases the early bird does get the worm. But when it comes to spring planting, farmers may want to use a little restraint and take a look at soil temperatures before cranking up their planers.

One of the keys to getting spring crops off to a good start is to heed soil temperatures.

Soil temperatures have been shown to have an important effect on how well seeds germinate. Planting in cool soils often leads to poor seed germination and poor crop stands. Plants that do come up often lack vigor for early growth. And this opens the door to early season disease and insect attacks.

Farmers are advised to begin planting only after the danger of a late frost is past and the soil has warmed to temperatures favorable to the intended crop.

Farmers also need to keep atuned to weather forecasts prior to planting. A sudden chance in weather conditions following planting can be detrimental to the crop, particularly a cool, wet spell that can lower soil temperatures drastically.

Just when is it safe to plant what crop? Average minimum temperatures (at the four-inch depth) for planting are as follows: corn, 50 degrees; sorghum, 55 degrees, and soybeans, 70 degrees. "Minimum" rather than "average" temperatures should be used for rice and peanuts, with rice being 60 degrees and peanuts, 70 degrees. Hardy vegetables such as onions, cabbage and potatoes can be planted once soil temperatures range between 45 and 50 degrees while warm-season vegetables such as tomatoes, melons, beans and peppers need soil that has warmed into the 60's.

With early season planting, particularly when soil temperatures are still marginal farmers need to pay particular attention to using high quality seed, fungicides, and other seed protectants, and adjusting seeding rates.

How do farmers keep abreast of changing soil temperatures? Daily readings are taken at various locations throughout Texas in cooperation with the Extention service, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, the National Weather Service and individual cooperators. For example, the regional temperature reading for Colorado County is based on temperatures at the TAMU Research Station at Eagle Lake.

Specific temperature readings for about 50 locations also are distributed daily through regular w ather service channels.

Keeping tabs on the weather and soil conditions can help farmers get off to a good start with spring planting. With the high cost of farm inputs, it's information that should be put to good use.

Soil Conservation News

Time to plant permanent grass is now

If you are thinking of planting permanent grass this spring, now is the time to begin preparations. The grass planting dates in Colorado County are from February 15 to May 15. However, coastal bermudagrass can be sprigged from January 1 to May 15.

A firm, clean seedbed is a must if your grass planting is to be a success. Seedbed preparation can be done with a disk harrow, a moldboard breaking plow, or an offset disk. The seedbed must be prepared so that all existing vegetation is destroyed, thus cutting down on the competing vegetation and giving the new grass seedling a better chance of survival. Think of the seedbed preparation being done in the same manner as you would prepare for planting a garden.

When you sprig coastal bermudagrass, plant the dormant sprigs no deeper than two or three inches. Always plant them in moist soil, and be sure to pack the soil around the sprigs as they are planted.

Planting seed-type grasses is a little different. The seeds must not be planted deeper than 1/4 to 3/4 inch. Seeding rates on the different grasses differ depending on the species of grass and are based on the amount of Pure Live Seed (PLS) planted. Seed-type grasses may be planted with grass drills or may be broadcast. When broadcasting the grass seed, use a cultipacker or some type of roller over the planted area to incorporate the seeds into the soil.

Different grass plant species are adapted to different kinds of soils. For example, gordo bluestem, callie bermudagrass, and alicia bermudagrass are adapted to ghe blackland clay soils. On the other hand, coastal bermudagrass and pensacola bahiagrass are well adapted to sandy soils. The Soil Conservation Service office can assist you in determining the grasses that are best adapted to your soils.

After the seeds or grass sprigs begin to grow, they need to be fertilized to become established quickly. As a rule of thumb, according to soil tests, an application of about 325 pounds of 13-13-13 fertilizer per acre is needed for grass establishment and to promote quick leaf and root growth in the plant.

These young plants must not be grazed during the first year of establishment so that they can establish a good root system. The grass leaves and stems are the food factories of the grass plant and are directly related to the development and growth if the root system is maintained at all times. When needed, weeds and other competitive plants will need to be controlled to aid in establishment of the young grass plant.

Cost-share for planting grass is available to those persons who qualify for it through the Colorado County ASCS office. This assistance provides cost-sharing for seedbed preparation, the seed or sprigs, the sprigging operation for coastal bermudagrass, and fertilizer for establishing the grass. However, funding cuts have limited the number of participants.

If you have questions about planting grass, selecting the correct grass species, fertilizer needs, ASCS cost-share assistance, or other questions about proper grass management, contact the personnel at the Soil Conservation Service in Columbus, 732-2773 or come by the County Agricultural Building at 316 Spring Street in Columbus.

'Just a little bit dishonest'

By Rev. E.B. Beasley Jr.

It has been said, "In the honor system, the professors have the honor and the students have the system," but that has not been the witness of Scripture or of history.

A man was able to join the Emperor of China's orchestra, although he could not play a note. Whenever the group played, he would hold his flute against his lips, not daring even to blow softly for fear he might cause a discord. He received a modest salary and was able to live comfortably.

One day, the emperor happened to desire that each musician play for him solo. The flutist became desperate. He tried to take quick professional lessons, but to no avail — he really had no ear for music. He pretended to be sick, but the Royal Physician who attended him knew better, causing him to be increasingly apprehensive.

On the day of his solo appearance, he took poison rather than face the music. From this comes the old Chinese proverb, "He dared not face the music."

When Aristotle, Grecian philosopher and tutor of Alexander the Great, was once asked what a man could gain by uttering falsehoods, he replied, "Not to be credited when he shall tell the truth."

May we who profess faith in Jesus live a life of His truth.

4-H horse program builds character

The care and training of a horse can build character, leadership and responsibility, and that's what the 4-H horse program is all about.

Owning a horse is a big investment in time and money, and training is a big undertaking that requires a lot of hard work. However, the effort can help a 4-H member grow and develop into a responsible citizen.

Specific objectives of the 4-H horse program are:

1. To acquire skills in horse management by owning a horse or pony and being responsible for it.
2. To appreciate riding as recreation.
3. To learn horsemanship skills and understand breeding, training and raising horses as a business.
4. To acquire safety skills to prevent injury to persons and animals.
5. To promote love for and humane treatment of animals.
6. To develop sportsmanship, cooperation, decision-making ability and public speaking skills through participation in demonstrations, tours, judging and exhibits.

4-H'ers with horse projects can compete at various horse shows held annually and can qualify for district and state competition. Those who excel in the project can qualify for awards provided by the American Quarter Horse Association, including six expense-paid trips to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago each fall and six $1,000 scholarships at the national level.

Further details about the 4-H horse program as well as other 4-H projects and activities at the county Extension office by calling 732-6694.
