Mid-year crop, livestock reports began in May

The Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service began contacting farmers and ranchers across the state for 1986 crop acreages and mid-year livestock inventories.

State statistician Dennis Findley emphasized that information from these surveys will help producers adjust their production and marketing plans for 1986. "Good marketing requires good information and advanced planning. Information from these surveys will provide Texas producers with solid facts and figures they can use when making their marketing plans.

"There are many economic uncertainties facing agriculture," Findley added, "and accurate, reliable figures will give producers a chance to make sound production and marketing decisions during the coming year."

Results of the confidential interviews, conducted by mail or in person by field enumerators, will be published in June and July.

To reduce survey costs, Findley is urging farmers and ranchers to return the mailed questionnaires as soon as possible. The reported information will be combined for state and county estimates.

Annual county estimates are published for livestock, dairy, poultry, cotton, field crops, small grains, fruits and pecans, vegetables, and cash receipts from the sale of farm products.

Hunting regulation changes adopted

Establishment of a uniform statewide white-tailed deer hunting season was among a number of hunting regulation changes adopted by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission recently in a public meeting in Austin.

The commission set season dates and bag limits for most game animals and birds, except those for migratory species and quail bag limits which will be adopted later.

The general white-tailed deer hunting season will be November 8, 1986 through January 4, 1987. The archery-only deer season only will be October 4 through November 2.

The changes were reviewed in 83 public hearings across the state during April, and fishing and hunting regulation changes will go into effect September 1, 1986. Saltwater regulations will become effective June 1, 1986.

The statewide whitetail season represents the first time in modern history that all Texas counties will have the same season dates.

The Commission also added 59 counties to the either-sex system of deer bag limits. Special antlerless tags will be issued to landowners with no limit as to acreage required for taking antlerless white-tailed deer. The counties experience chronic overpopulations of does.

Brazoria, Colorado, Ford Bend and Lavaca counties also were placed in the either-sex program, but with a limit of only one buck per season.

The commission also authorized an either-sex archery bag limit for whitetails in counties where antlerless deer were harvested during the past gun season.

Mule deer hunters will have the same hunting seasons in 1986 as in 1985. The Panhandle gun season will be November 22-30; the Trans-Pecos season will be November 29 through December 7.

Language defining a bow for hunting was for the first time adopted by the commission. The definition specifies a legal bow is a "long bow, recurved bow, or compound bow that is hand-held and hand-drawn, and that has no mechanical device built into, or attached that will enable the archer to lock the bow at full or partial draw. Other than energy stored by the draw bow, no device to propel the arrow will be permitted."

Amended archery regulations include requirements that bows have at least a 40-pound minimum peak draw weight, rather than the ability to propel an arrow 130 yards as specified in the previous regulation. Broadhead arrows must be a minimum width of 7/8-inch with at least two cutting edges.

Broadhead arrows will be required for all game animals (except squirrels) and turkeys. Small game may be taken with blunt, judo points and other similar arrowheads and lesser poundage requirements for the bow. It will not be permitted to take small game with target or field points.

Several regulations on archery hunting currently in effect will be continued, including the name and address of the owner written on each arrow; prohibition of drugs or poisons; prohibition of crossbows to take game animals or birds; and permitting the possession of a shotgun provided shot size of No. 4 or smaller.

In upland game, several counties were added to those having an either-sex turkey bag limit, and Cooke and Milam counties were added to those having a spring season. In the Panhandle, the turkey season was lengthened from 16 days to 58 days (standard fall season) and the bag limit was increased from one turkey, either sex to two turkeys, either sex.

In Pecos and Terrell counties the bag limit will be changed from one turkey, gobbler or bearded hen, to two turkeys, either sex. In Ward and Crane counties, the bag limit will be changed from two turkeys, gobblers or bearded hens, to two turkeys, either sex. This provides Texas with one standard fall turkey season and two bag limits.

Hunting seasons set for other species include: antelope, October 4-12 in 55 counties; javelina, no closed season in 50 counties, October 4-February 22 in 37 counties; squirrel, no closed season and no bag limit in 133 counties, May 1-31 and October 1-January 15 in 53 counties, no closed season with a bag limit of10 per day and 20 in possession in 22 counties; aoudad sheep in Armstrong, Briscoe, Donley, Floyd, Hall, Motley, Randall and Swisher counties, October 25-November 7 and January 3-18; prairie chicken, October 18-19; pheasant, in Panhandle counties December 13-28, coastal counties November 8-December 7; quail, November 1-February 22 statewide (bag limits to be set later); and chachalaca, December 6-January 25.

Loan restructuring for farmers, ranchers

A decision by the Farm Credit System to allow loan restructuring is a "major victory for financially-troubled farmers and ranchers," according to the president of the Texas Farm Bureau.

"Farm Bureau's efforts to gain restructuring by commercial and Farm Credit System banks has finally paid off, said S.M. True, Plainview cotton and grain producer.

"We've been looking for this day ever since we announced our two-tiered debt restructuring proposal in February," he said. "The essence of the two-tiered plan," he explained, "is to put part of a farmer's debt on the back burner, at a lower rate of interest, while the working part of the debt is paid off. Eventually, all of the debt would be repaid."

The Farm Credit System last week announced its plan to implement the nationwide loan restructuring policy. The program, FCS explained, is designed to assure a "fair and consistent approach" to restructuring the debt of financially-stressed borrowers.

The loan restructuring policy was endorsed by the presidents of the 37 Farm Credit Banks and was approved by the board of directors of the Farm Credit Corporation of America. The FCCA is the central policy-making organization and spokesman for the Farm Credit System.

"This policy is an important step for the system and the nearly 900,000 farmers and ranchers that borrow from it," said H. Brent Beasley, president and chief executive officer of the FCCA. "The decision made this week by system leaders clearly represents the beginning of a new era in farm credit."

The Farm Bureau has been attempting to get approval for debt restructuring since February. It was successful in obtaining necessary state and federal regulations to allow commercial banks to restructure.

Congress is supporting Farm Credit System restructuring. As of May 9, a total of 188 House members had co-sponsored House Concurrent Resolution 310, and 59 senators had co-sponsored the Dole-Nickles Agricultural Credit Concurrent Resolution.

The two resolutions urged the Farm Credit administration to practice forbearance instead of foreclosure on its borrowers. True asked members of the Texas delegation in Congress to co-sponsor the resolutions.

Both Senators Lloyd Bentsen and Phil Gramm of Texas co-sponsored the Senate resolution. Texas co-sponsors in the House include Reps. Michael Andrews, D-Houston; Joe Barton, R-Ennis; Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo; John Bryant, D-Dallas; Albert Bustamente, D-San Antonio; Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs; Larry Combest, R-Lubbock; Kika de la Garza, D-Mission; Marvin Leath, D-Marlin; Ralph Hall, D-Rockwall; Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford; and Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin.

Conservation agency seeks more volunteers

Many more volunteers are needed to aid soil and water conservation efforts, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service is out to find them.

Coy A. Garrett, SCS state conservationist for Texas, said that state and local SCS offices welcome applications from prospective volunteers throughout the year. He said the number of volunteers working with SCS has steadily increased since 1981. The farm bill passed by Congress that year authorized legal and insurance protection for the first time for the agency's volunteers.

During 1985, SCS had 660 volunteers who performed a wide variety of duties. They assisted in public information programs, did field surveying or field layout work, did clerical jobs, and had other assignments.

Anyone can volunteer to help the conservation agency, Garrett said, but anyone under age 16 must have written consent from a parent or guardian and work under the supervision of an adult, such as a teacher, scout leader, or church or civic club leader.

SCS field offices are working closely with local conservation districts this year to intensify the search for volunteers and to orient prospective volunteers toward high priority actions to safeguard soil, water and related resources.

Garrett said that the skills and talents of volunteer applicants will be matched with the needed tasks in state and local offices. Applicants will be notified as soon as they are accepted for the offices where they want to work.

Prospective volunteers should apply to their nearest SCS district office (in Colorado County, the SCS office is located at 316 Spring Street in Columbus). The office is listed in the telephone book under U.S. Government, Department of Agriculture.

The Osbornes feel 'just terrific' about their Good Cents home...

Good Cents

and the small monthly electric bill.

And with good reason. The comfortable, livable house Jim and Dee Osborne built on Padre Island has vast expanses of glass that give them marvelous views of the water. Yet, even with all those windows, their home is so energy efficient that their utility bills actually are smaller than those of neighbors living in smaller houses.

Before they moved in a year and a half ago, a Good Cents computer analysis suggested that energy costs for their 3,000-square foot home would be only one-third as much as those for a conventional house of the same size built to typical minimum builder codes. Incredibly, they've done even better than that.

"On a month-to-month basis, we not only have achieved those savings but have beat them by approximately 10%," Osborne reports. Their electric bills average around $100 a month, including the $30 or so it takes to run the pump for their pool.

"It's a program that's there for anybody, and it's free for the asking," Osborne observes. "You just can't go wrong."

Getting organized: maintenance

By Peggy Kalina
County Extension Agent

It is much easier to get a house in order than to keep it that way. That's why it is important to get all family members involved in controlling clutter and managing the household responsibilities.

Call your family together to establish a clutter control crew. Work together to set up rules, including a reward system for good performance and an agreed-upon penalty for violators.

Have an established place for everything, and encourage all family members to return things back to their "homes" as soon as possible after their use. Then set up a clutter corner or box (silent butler) for collecting out of place things. Establish an agreed-upon time when things can be retrieved or redistributed to their appropriate places.

Once you get your household organized, beward of the "up and down" cycles of maintenance. It is awfully easy to fall into the trap of spending a lot of time and effort getting your house in top shape and then waiting until it hits bottom again before you do any more cleaning. Such a pattern is frustrating and wastes both time and effort. A better way is to establish a regular pattern of daily maintenance that keeps the jobs down to size and eliminates job pileups.

Take a few minutes and make a list of all the maintenance activities that need to be done around your home. You may find it easiest to do this by breaking the jobs down by rooms in your house and don't forget those things that need to be done outside. While you are making your list, try to think of some ways to eliminate some jobs or at least reduce the amount of time spent doing them.

After you have come up with your activity list, decide whether each activity needs to be done every day, once a week, once every two weeks, monthly, or seasonally. Then work out a housework schedule that you feel comfortable with. Some people make "to do lists" which include their household activities as well as any employment or personal activities. Others like to put their activities into a calendar format, and still others use a file card system. No one system works perfectly for everyone. You may want to experiment with different ways of setting up schedules until you find one that suits you and your family.

Breaking big jobs into little jobs is just as important in regular maintenance as it is in getting organized in the first place. That's where "mini-jobs" come in. Mini-jobs are tasks that can be completed in ten minutes or less. When you set up your housework system, designate some of your tasks as "mini-jobs" so that when you find yourself with just a few spare minutes, you can quickly pat one of those jobs out of the way.

We've discussed several different strategies for getting your households organized and keeping them that way. And now is a good time to start experimenting with them. Don't procrastinate any longer. Remember that you can control clutter - it doesn't have to control you!
