Legislature backlashed for recent work

In a week marked by backlashes to the Legislature's recent work and political jockeying for elections three years away, those at the Capitol observed:

•Standard and Poor's Corp. drop the bond rating on some Texas government bonds a notch, from AA- to AA-, blaming the recent Legislature for not providing a safer economic cushion.

•Gov. Bill Clements predicts "one of the biggest scandals in Texas history" is brewing in some corners of the Texas Savings and Loan industry.

•A recent Texas Poll claims that Clements' own popularity, as well as the Legislature's, has slipped since the special session; and don't commit.

•San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros' drop out of the 1990 gubernatorial race, setting off more jockeying for position among Texas Democrats.

Obviously, many Democrats feel the opposite, as evidenced by the scurrying around by party rank-and-file. Many of them are concerned about Mattos' slim victory over Barrera, and the public's memory of his commercial bribery indictment trial, where he was found innocent.

At one point, Mauro spoke out to advise that Texas' elected officials should concentrate more on doing their jobs than on running for higher office the next three years.

But the speculation grows, and while other names may surface in the future, the talk today is of Mauro and Richards. Both run agencies which make money for Texas. Both are hard-driving.

Mattos, Bishops agree
Meanwhile, Mattos' probe into the illegal football payments at SMU moved ahead when a bishops' panel agreed to let his office look at its files under semi-protection of confidentiality.

Under the agreement, Mattos will keep the information confidential unless it is used in litigation.

His office also used to stop two San Antonio men from real estate schemes which violate the Texas homestead law, and to close a Stafford company from marketing alone vera products not approved by the feds.

Wallace steps down
Railroad commission chairman Mack Wallace will resign his post to join a private law firm, giving Clements the chance to appoint the first Republican ever to that post.

Mauro and Richards are being sought as "asset management" candidates by concerned Democrats who believe Mattos couldn't beat a Republican opponent.

Mattos' '86 GOP opponent, Roy Barrera Jr., predicted that Mattos had it wrapped up now, pointing out he will pile up enough commitments to leave no room for Democrats who

Call for energy plan
Whoever it is—Clements' new appointee will likely be an advocate of a national energy policy.

Clements last week urged President Reagan to appoint a commission to develop a plan to benefit the U.S. economy.

"To my knowledge, there has never been a United States national energy policy," he said.

Clements also named a former Harris County official, Marta Greytak, to the Public Utilities Commission.

Other Highlights
•Houston state district judge Jon

Hughes announced his crossover to the Republican Party, blaming Democrats for "undue persuasion" of court judges, a charge local Democrats denied.

•Former chairman of the State Board of Insurance Lyndon Olson Jr., whose term expired last week, will return home as president of an insurance holding company, National Group Corp. of Wall.

•University of Texas officials learned last week that a Denver high school teacher, Edna H. Rhambo, was the first black student to receive a UT degree, about five months ahead of the man believed to have been first, John Hargis.

•Mr. and Mrs. Tom E. Austin celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last Sunday with a reception in the Community Center by their children, Milton Hardison of Altair and Leon Perry Jr. of Garwood were among the seven selectees ordered to report for induction August 7 at La Grange. Mrs. H.P. Allen observed her 95th birthday Sunday, August 4 with many relatives and friends helping her celebrate.
