Mattox playing king-of-the-mountain against Richards in governor's race

Maybe things will even out a bit on the Texas Railroad Commission, and maybe they'll even pick a chairman, now that former Congressman Kent Hance of Lubbock has been sworn in to fill the seat vacated by Mack Wallace. Wallace, who has served on the commission since 1973, resigned recently to join an Austin law firm.

As the lone Republican on the three-man commission, Hance will have the vote to hand the gavel to either of the two warring Democrats, John Sharp or Jim Nugent.

Observers are speculating as to how long it will take Hance to take sides with one or the other, although one group sees Hance holding out to cut a deal making himself chairman.

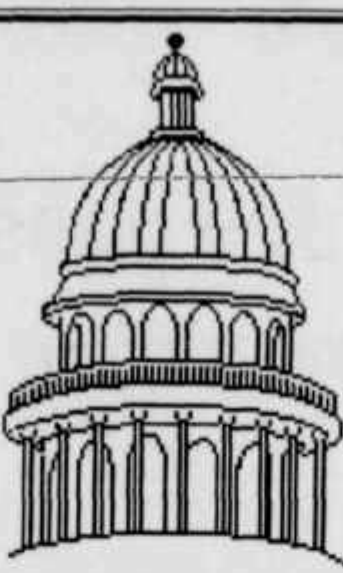

Watching Hance at his swearing-in ceremony, it was apparent he is comfortable, perhaps fulfilled, in his new position on the political playing field with his new team, the GOP.

Democratic disarray
And despite the heat he caught last week for billing the state $200,000 for official use of his plane, Gov. Clements, who named Hance to his new job, said Republicans are gaining clout in the midst of disarray in the Texas Democratic Party.

The disarray the governor is talking about is the potential problem Democrats face as many of their elected officials talk about resigning in mid-term, creating vacancies for Clements to fill with Republicans.

Creating incumbents, you might say. Why this is occurring is hard to pin down, but the Democrats were worried enough about it last week to pass a resolution urging all Democratic officeholders to serve out their terms.

Certainly there's enough open sniping between some top Democratic officials as they jockey now to grab the choice spots on the 1990 ballot, three years away.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who organized a statewide beach cleanup, said some 7,100 volunteers picked up almost 215 tons of garbage in three hours.

Highwater wants a wine cooler made exclusively from Texas wines to tap into the market now dominated by New York and California.

He's talking about coolers processed at a former soft drink bottling plant in La Grange.

"The American Ethnic Coalition, leading the fight for an amendment to make English the official state language, asked both political parties to put the issue on their March primary ballots.

The Republicans will consider the request at a November meeting. The Democrats passed a resolution against it.

Gov. Clements' reappointed legislative corporate raider T. Boone Pickens Jr. of Amarillo to the West Texas State University Board of Regents.

Vice President George Bush last week announced his statewide committee of 27 vice chairmen. Many of the biggies were listed.

"State Rep. Charles Evans, R-Hurst, said he will forego reelection next year to become a lobbyist. Hurst, one of the Speaker's top lieutenants, chairs the powerful Calendars Committee.

State Capitol Highlights

By Lyndell Williams

Mattox, Richards
Attorney General Jim Mattox, who's playing king-of-the-mountain for the governor's mansion, turned his gun on likely opponent, Treasurer Ann Richards, just as he did to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Henry Cisneros before they departed.

Mattox said Richards can't raise enough money to win, and that her candidacy would be divisive for the party. Apparently, he expects the nomination without a fight in the primary.

But street-fighter Mattox will get a fight, and it may be the hardest one for him to handle. He'll have to fight a woman.

If he goes hammer and tongs after Richards, as he usually does to anyone he faces, he may create a sympathy backlash for the lady. But don't underestimate Richards; she's a tough cookie who can play politics with the best of them.

Texas leaders were pleased to learn last week that the jobless rate fell slightly, from 8.7 to 8.3 percent.
