Legislature spends $5 billion on dinner... can't cover it

Just a few weeks ago, the Legislature, dominated by Democrats, wrote a $5 billion check it can't cover for a sumptuous banquet of state services.

Now, Capitol halls are filled with very nervous state officials and agency heads wondering if they'll be there when dinner (state spending) is served.

Why? Last week, two top private sector Democrats, advising Gov. Ann Richards on how to cover that check, rattled lawmakers statewide with a proposal to raise an additional $11.5 billion.

Former Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and premier Democratic party financier Jess Hay want her task force to vote on a package of personal and corporate taxes and a modest tax on aviation fuel.

A Texas family earning $35,000 a year would pay an extra $1,500 in state taxes, an increase of 68 percent, analysts say.

Some lawmakers, particularly House members, believe the proposal is a political suicide plan, and that's why they are nervous.

Slashing Alternatives

Politically, a more desirable route is to reduce spending; that's intimidating.

ing to Democrats in the Legislature who, led by Hobby, celebrated the 1980s with massive expenditures.

How massive were they? Billions! Tax hikes one after another: the issue is the largest and most credible in the Texas Republican Party arsenal.

But Democrats like Richards and Comptroller John Sharp know it, and they know they can defuse that issue with some good-looking spending cuts next month.

No Sacred Cows

That's why state bureaucrats are nervous, their jobs are on the line in July when lawmakers meet in special session to write the budget.

A new law will abolish all state agencies at year's end, except those given extended life in the budget this summer.

Education Overhaul Eyed
Education experts last week confirmed that the new school finance reform law will cost $370 million more than lawmakers had estimated for the next two years, primarily because of a substantial drop in property values statewide.

Meanwhile, Sharp's plan to call for a complete overhaul of the Texas Education Agency could backfire by sparking morale problems that may cause many of the department's best people to quit, said Tom Anderson, interim commissioner.

Sources who have seen a draft of the plan said Sharp will recommend the 1,100-person agency be dismantled and rebuilt under new Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Memo, who takes office July 1.

Democrats' Quandary
Texas Democrats are in a quandary.

Likely, they will balance the budget with a combination of new taxes and new spending cuts.

The taxes are certain to alienate more middle class voters, while the cuts, if they do them wrong, will enrage their own lower class supporters.

Then, having done that, democrats must seek re-election in 1992 against a Republican ticket led by a Texan in the White House.

Workers' Comp Defectors
If the budget cuts work, then Democrats will fare better than expected, but who can predict how those budget chips will fall?

After all, lawmakers thought they had licked the workers' compensation insurance problem, but a Valley judge ruled with labor and struck it down.

Last week, State Board of Insurance Chairman Claire Korioh, of a trial lawyer appointed by Richards, warned that some 2,500 Texas employees dropped the coverage in April and May, making a total of 8,000 defections since September.

Koriorh called the situation scary, "a dangerous trend." Others say it reflects the business sector's lack of faith that the reform bill will reduce the skyrocketing cost of coverage.

Redistricting Suite
Gov. Richards let the Legislature's redistricting plan become law without her signature, prompting civil and minority rights groups and the Texas Republican Party to file lawsuits to strike it down.

She said if U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher approves new census figures, the Legislature will meet in special session to update the plan.

Other Highlights

State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison said that even talking about an income tax has hurt Texas. She said such a levy would slow the economic recovery, scare away prospective businesses and strip the state of a key advantage in competition for new jobs.

The U.S. Senate passed an amendment to its five-year transportation bill that would give Texas $1 in road money for every $1 in gasoline taxes it sends to the National Highway Trust Fund, the first time Texas has broken even since the program was launched in 1956.

The Texas Supreme Court decided it will hear the case of two state prison inmates using the state because television in their cellblocks are too loud. Lower courts dismissed the case as frivolous.

Texas to receive increase in community funding

The State of Texas will receive $54,328,000 from the Department of Housing and Urban Development to implement its Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program for the next year in rural communities throughout Texas, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm announced recently.

Gramm said the new funding amounts to an 11.4% increase over the current year level of funding. The senator said the funds will go to the Texas Department of Community Affairs to implement the "Non-entitlement" share of the CDBG program for smaller cities and counties. Individual cities and counties within Texas will compete for the funds.

Non-entitlement cities are cities that have populations lower than 50,000, Gramm noted. Cities and counties use CDBG funds to carry out a wide range of community development activities directed toward neighborhood facilities, service and infrastructure.

A total of 154 Texas cities and counties received Non-entitlement CDBG funds in 1990.

Saunders from Washington

The 72nd Legislature adjourned its regular session May 27, but Texas lawmakers won't have much time to relax. The Governor has indicated that she will call legislators back to Austin July 8 for the purpose of crafting a state budget. Some of the key issues passed this session included education reform, insurance reform, environmental packages, redistricting and of course, ethics reform.

As the Representative of District 30, I would like to take the opportunity to tell you about the legislation that I sponsored this session. Of the 52 bills that I filed, 27 of them passed. The majority of them dealt with environmental issues. Major legislation I sponsored included Senate Bill 1099 that places restrictions on hazardous waste disposal sites; Senate Bill 1340 that encourages recycling and reduces the need for new landfills; and Senate Bill 818 that sets new standards for water quality.

I carried and passed several local bills. I had two bills dealing with the power and duties of a Water Control and Improvement Districts for Fayette and Bastrop counties. House Bill 2782 created the Colorado-Fayette Hospital District and House bill 1057 addressed the spending of the budget for County Commissioners. I also passed twelve Congratulatory or Memorial Resolutions. Other legislation I carried and passed dealt with the sale of gamefish, shrimp and oyster regulation; a spring turkey license; exotic farm animals, aquaculture and rural health issues.

We also worked on several major pieces of legislation that did not pass in the regular session, that we will continue to work on during the special session; they are The Clean Air Act and the development of the Depart-

Letters to the Editor

Eagle Lake's loss is Katy's gain

It is with mixed emotions that I bid farewell to my sister, Dr. Karen Evers, as she begins a new business venture in Katy.

Her decision to leave her Eagle Lake clinic and open a practice in Katy will enable her and her husband to spend more time with the kids and for that reason I am delighted. I am saddened, though, that I am losing a great sister and a very dedicated veterinarian to Katy.

Karen, we love you and are proud of you.

David, Sharon,
Lindsay,
Big Boy, Girlie
and Baby Kitty

Karen has always been totally devoted to her practice (the philosophy of hard work and dedication is something she inherited from our father). The energy she has displayed in raising four terrific children, running a veterinary clinic and hospital and maintaining a home in Eagle Lake and in Katy is incredible. I can't remember a holiday or family get-together in which she did not leave to treat someone's livestock or beloved pet. It is a shame that she did not have the time to join organizations in Eagle Lake and share her energy and enthusiasm to help revitalize Eagle Lake in its time of need.

The Headlight reports on "the yard of the month", but I am confident anyone would agree that her place of business could make "yard of the month" a reality.

I salute you, Karen, and am proud to be able to call you my friend.

Sheriff Esterling to the rescue

Dear Editor:

This year before we held our annual Juneteenth Festival, I was told by the Eagle Lake Police Department that I would have to have an officer on the premises at all times and when I said okay, can you help, they said no! Due to some kind of policy they were unable to assist. Well, then I was frantic. I then called upon Sheriff Bill Esterling, and I just knew he would turn me down, but instead, with a big smile and a cheery voice, he said "ya betcha, we will be there". And to my surprise, he and Deputy Bill Latimore were right there. So, thanks to these guys, our Juneteenth was safe and enjoyable.

Sincerely,
Bea Kaykendall

The Gulf of Mexico Task Force, of which I am a co-chairman, recently met with the head of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), to voice concerns about the disparity in funding allocations.

The Gulf of Mexico (700,000 sq. mi.), is more than seven times the size of the Great Lakes (94,000 sq. mi.), and about 215 times the size of Chesapeake Bay (3,200 sq. mi.). Yet, Gulf of Mexico, programs in the EPA receive only $11.4 million compared to the $3 billion in Great Lakes receive and $16 million designated to Chesapeake Bay. This funding disparity is unacceptable considering the overall size of the Gulf, the amount of shipping and off-shore drilling it accommodates and its value as an environ-
