Official clears up hunting regulations questions

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials say every hunting season brings some confusion concerning hunting regulations, and this year is no exception.

Ron George, program leader for migratory shore and upland game birds, said many of the questions he has answered this season involve teal hunting, steel versus lead shot requirements for sandhill crane hunting and hunting access to Conservation Reserve Program lands.

George said the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service closed the September teal season this year because of low populations resulting from drought on the breeding grounds in the northern U.S. and Canada.

However, the USFWS did not close teal hunting during the regular fall duck season. The regular season is open in the High Plains Mallard Management Unit from Nov. 16-Jan. 5. The rest of the state was open Nov. 23-Dec. 1 and will be open Dec. 7-Jan. 5.

This season, a person may legally take blue-winged, green-winged and cinnamon teal as well as all other ducks in any combination as part of his aggregate daily bag limit of three ducks with a few exceptions, he said.

The aggregate daily duck bag may include no more than two mallards (only one of which may be a female), two wood ducks, one pintail, one red-head and one mottled duck. The season is closed only on canvasback ducks.

Steel shot currently is not required for sandhill crane hunting in Texas, George said.

However, since no person, while hunting waterfowl (duck, geese and coots) anywhere in the state, may possess shot gun shells containing lead shot or loose lead shot for muzzle-loading shotguns, a hunter who is in the field hunting sandhill cranes and waterfowl must use nontoxic shot.

The only approved nontoxic shot is steel shot, including copper and/or nickel plated steel shot.

George has received several questions about hunting access on CRP lands.

Texas landowners have taken about 3.4 million acres of highly-erodible cropland out of production and planted it in some type of permanent vegetative cover for a 10-year period. Many of these fields, which are located primarily in the High Plains and Rolling Plains of North-west Texas, provide good wildlife habitat and hunting opportunities.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture regulations that established the CRP allow the landowner who enrolls his land in the program to continue to control access to his land, he said. The landowner may prohibit all hunting on his CRP acreage, allow anyone he wants to hunt for free or lease the hunting rights to anyone he wishes.

A hunter cannot legally hunt on any CRP field he wishes without first obtaining the landowner's permission," George said.

Hunters have an obligation to know their hunting regulations. This information can be found in the 1991-92 Texas Hunting Guide and the Texas Early Season and Late Season Migratory Game Bird Hunting Digests which should be available any place where hunting licenses are sold.

ELCH nurses ACLS certified

Eagle Lake Community Hospital is pleased to have several nurses trained and certified in Advanced Cardiac Life Support (ACLS). Ramona King, R.N. and Obara Munoz, R.N., attended an ACLS course in Austin in March. These two nurses were sponsored by Thomas Clinic and ELCH.

Colleen Waligura, R.N. and Marjorie Porter, R.N., attended a course in El Campo in August. They were sponsored by the Pink Ladies and ELCH. Other nurses employed by the hospital who are ACLS certified are Susan Hernandez, R.N. and Martha Seidel, R.N.

Eagle Lake Community Hospital promotes and takes an active part in the continuing education of its nursing staff. Continued education in the field of medicine is a must in our fast-moving society. In our small community it is essential that we remain current so we can provide high quality care.

Working in a small hospital is a challenge to all nursing staff members because there are many times when a physician is not in the building. This means the nurse must be able to handle cardiac/respiratory arrest (no pulse-no breathing). This course consists of three days of lecture, hands on training and testing. It is a very intensive program requiring a great deal of preparation and concentration.

One of the hospital's goals is to have all its licensed nurses certified in ACLS. The continued education of our nursing staff is one way ELCH strives to fulfill its pledge to this community with quality care.
