To The Editor & You

Reader sends reply to 'Complaining Neighbors'

To the Editor:
 I do not know the "big mouth lady" or the "small boy in the alley."
 I do not believe in violence, but mother let me ask you: What is your small son doing in the alley at night?
 Have you asked him what he does to annoy the neighbors?
 We all lock our windows and doors for fear of prowlers, not big mouth ladies. By letting your son prowls the alleys at night at such a young age he will most likely find trouble. It would be tragic if he was mistaken for a burglar and shot.

 Mother while you are praying for your neighbor pray for guidance for your son.

 where your child is?"

A Proven Record of Results No Record, No Qualifications

- Texas has led the nation in new private-sector job creation for three consecutive years.
- The number of Texas prisoners being released from prison has been cut by more than 50%; parole has been cut by two-thirds; 75,000 new prison beds are being built; the crime rate is the lowest since 1985.
- Student achievement tests are at a 14-year high; the dropout rate is falling; the number of poorly performing schools has dropped from 326 to 55.
- Bush has never even served on a task force on crime or education — or any other important issue.
- Bush claims to be a successful businessman and "owner" of the Texas Rangers, even though he "owns" only 1.8% of the Rangers and his other business ventures have lost $371 million.
- Bush favors spending our tax dollars to send kids to private schools, a costly policy that would hurt our public schools — or destroy them altogether.

Parker wants state constitutional amendment for funding schools

A leading Senate proponent of public education said last week he will introduce a proposal in the 1995 Texas Legislature to require lawmakers to set aside funds for public schools before budgeting money for any other purpose.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said current law makes it too easy to shunt public education.

"We have to get our priorities straight," he said.

Parker's bill would require a constitutional amendment, which would require support of two-thirds of the Legislature and approval by voters in a statewide referendum.

Gov. Ann Richards said she supports Parker's efforts "to place education funding on the No. 1 priority of the Texas Legislature."

Republican gubernatorial nominee George W. Bush, who has advocated making public education the state's top priority, said, "I welcome the governor aboard, but suggest election-eve politics has something to do with it."

Survey: Bush Has an Edge
 A Texas Poll conducted Oct. 6-15 found Republican challenger George Bush ahead with 45% of likely voters backing him to 44% for incumbent Democratic Gov. Richards.

The poll, which surveyed 675 Texans, showed Richards the leader among women, with 50% to Bush's 38%, while the reverse was true for men, 53% of whom favor Bush to 36% for Richards.

What the poll did not tell is that Republican women, who accounted for 22% of Richards' vote in 1990, are leaning more toward Bush than they did for GOP nominee Clayton Williams in 1990.

According to the Austin American Statesman, the 1990 election was dominated by women voters, who made up more than half the electorate.

The poll also shows that 82% of black respondents favor Richards, to only 5% for Bush; and 60% of Hispanic favor Richards to 26% for Bush. White respondents, however, favor Bush, 54% over Richards (35%).

And — no surprise — Richards draws most of her support from liberals (78%), while more conservatives (67%) lined up for Bush.

AG Doesn't Live in Austin
 Statewide elected officials are required by the Texas Constitution to "reside at the seat of government" but Attorney General Dan Morales makes his home in Spicewood—a 30-minute drive west of Austin.

Taking the Constitution at face value, Morales might wish to consider moving his domicile to the capital city. But, according to his spokesman, Ron Dusek, the attorney general's law offices may live wherever the want in Texas, as long as they keep their offices in Austin.

"We believe that the intent is that the offices must be maintained here so that some officeholder doesn't take his particular office and all of his employees and re-establish them in some city away from the center of government," said Dusek.

According to an Associated Press report, most state officials base their interpretation on a 1957 opinion by then-Attorney General Will Wilson, who used the comptroller and treasurer as examples of officeholders who must reside in Austin.

Which Poll Do You Believe?
 A couple of weeks ago, a poll by the consumer group, Public Citizen, said Texans want to protect endangered species but don't favor compensating landowners if the federal government needs to set aside land for that purpose.

However, a more recent opinion poll by Daniel Edelman Inc. says Texans don't think the feds have the right to restrict the use of private property and landowners indeed should be compensated.

Four hundred Texans answered the poll, which was conducted in May and June and commissioned by a coalition of agricultural groups fighting the Endangered Species Act.

According to the poll, 77.5% of (See Highlights, Page 8)
