Treatment of Urinary Tract Infections

Urinary tract infections (UTIs) occur much more frequently in women and girls than in men and boys. UTIs in men may involve the prostate and often are more difficult to treat than infections experienced by women. These infections can occur anywhere in the urinary tract, but are most common in the bladder. Symptoms of a UTI may include an urge to urinate, a burning sensation during urination, and a feeling that the bladder has not completely emptied after urination.

The National Institute of Diabetes and Kidney Diseases estimates that by age 30, half of all women experience at least one UTI. The FDA Consumer magazine recently reported that UTIs cause more than 6 million office visits to physicians and cost the U.S. health care system about $4.5 billion.

The most common cause of uncomplicated UTIs in women is the bacteria E. coli. Bacteria associated with a UTI can be detected in the physician's office with a culture and sensitivity test. However, since UTIs are so painful, many physicians often treat a suspected infection before results of the culture and sensitivity test are available. Prescription medicines often used to treat UTIs include trimethoprim, cotrimoxazole, amoxicillin, nitrofurantoin, and a group of newer medicines called the quinolones.

Raiders fumble game to Cardinals

The Raiders took on the Columbus Cardinals in the opening game of 23-3A district play. Rice got off to a good start but then fumbles and defensive lapses cost us the chance to win or make it a closer game than it was. Offensively, we looked good except for the fumbles that really hurt us. Brandon Mathis had a good game throwing the ball as he was 7-16-1 for 162 yards. James Cotton had 103 yards on 17 carries, a completed pass for 54 yards, threw a T.D. to Michael Wiese and scored on a nine yard T.D. run. He also had three kick-off returns for 72 yards.

"Here it is!" seems to be what Raider #2, Jesse Bishop, is telling the referees, and #32, Larry Henderson, agrees. He recovered this Cardinal fumble on the 7 yard line to end the third quarter, leading to Rice's second touchdown with less than a minute gone in the fourth.
