Views On Dental Health

BONDING — TODAY'S DENTAL MIRACLE

The 20th century has come up with a bundle of new discoveries. Dentistry is no exception. One of the most impressive is a process called bonding. It is a revolution in dentistry. Known as a "one-stop transformation", bonding not only covers stains completely but also rebuilds chipped or cracked teeth, closes front gaps, and builds up old, eroded teeth to make them look younger.

Bonding is the process by which tooth-colored plastic, called a composite resin, is painted onto the front surface of stained or damaged teeth. The plastic is hardened under a special ultra violet light, and finally the coating is shaped and polished. The process is completely painless, fast, and fairly long-lasting.

One of the drawbacks to bonding is the possibility of a chip or a nick, so you have to be more careful when biting down on some hard foods. With the old composites, the color would yellow after a few years. But, the new age hybrid composites are stronger and resist discoloration.
