Region III gets technology grants

The Texas Education Agency has announced grants dated in the Commissioner of Education's Access Initiatotaling $33 million for technology in schools and librar-tive. ies. The Region III Education Service Center (ESC), fiscal agent for a consortium of schools and libraries in the area, has received a grant in the amount of $1,269,705 for technological infrastructure.

One of the Region III TIE Grant participants is the Rice

The grant will establish a regional network infrastructure for 39 public school districts, 16 private schools, and three public libraries that will include Internet access in the libraries, workstations for students and teachers, library automation, and professional development.

The grant also includes equipment for the ESC, which will establish Region III ESC as a technology hub as man-

The project will allow Region III ESC to continue its position of technological leadership in the region.

A major emphasis of the project will be library resource sharing through the Texas Education Agency's statewide database of school library holdings, the Texas Library Connection (TLC).

Project director for this grant is Ruth Dahlstrom, Lirary/Technology specialist at Region III ECS.

These awards are part of the Texas Education Agency's Technology Integration in Education program, a state program funded under the federal Technology Literacy Challenge Fund.
